The Avant-Gardist State of Patagonia ~~~ Gauchos and Mapuches, orgies and parties, avant-garde art, futurism, syndicalism, the New Man, general strikes, the glorification of violence, spiritual nationalism, esoteric occultism, CIA spooks, Spartanian homosexuality, public sodomy, and more

Triomphe du Surréalisme (1968)

- There are many things said about Patagonia but few actually know what goes on behind the Andes mountains. Tales of human depravation and man's inner darkest self run wild. A place where avant-garde culture flourish and the artist don't fear the censor. Where all live bold and free under the gaze of the Patron. Yet all dreams will come to an end soon...

cool with you for the most parts, had it not for the fact that you are insanely violent. Good Gott man, you need to chill out and take a different hobby. Or just let me know and you can start punching me. It sounds weird when I say it, but trust me, I can take a hit. Or two. Or a thousand. If you are angry and you know it, we can go to that faraway planet full of mountains that no one lives in, and just start punching boulders and mountains. It works for me when I had one of those days. Or months - being a woman did make that happen, so-whoops, TMI. Anyway, see you again soon, and hey, I am going to drop you off from this height now. Haha, I'm just kidding, here, let me put you down gently.

"I recall the beloved and glorious leader referring to this one as a useless general. I am able to see why. It is my opinion that we should invade this nation of this person with an overly long name, and put their entire population in concentration camps, so that we may do experiments on them to better understand their biology. Starting with dissecting the useless general themselves. I'm certain we can all come to a better understanding of each other by cutting your people open and seeing what all of the organs do. For science."

"One who calls herself a diligent scientist yet proclaims religious devotion to a supposed false goddess. I'll grant her that she was constructed that way, but still. She reminds me of what would happen if you crossed Tensai with a Tengokuren. An obsession with knowledge and science, truth and reason, all shrouded by this inescapable piety. She also reminds me of Naosu in some ways- maybe a little of myself, back when I had more of an obsession with experimentation. I never dissected things for knowledge though. I just wanted them to feel pain. That's enough about me though. I don't really know how well Kaloru leads her country in the absence of her creator, but I imagine it is little different in the end. Still a need for conquest and domination, now coloured by a sadistic scientific curiosity and genuine worship. The most ruthless aspects of a scientist's need to reason combined with the tenets of absolute devotion that define a religious servant. I wonder if She was ever like that, before She fully pursued the path of deceptive divinity..."

"Commander Nathan Parker Simmons, rather this Nathan Parker Simmons, appears to act as a soldier first and foremost, but is admirable in that regard with how committed he is to defending Earth's inhabitants from alien siege. The circumstances of his Earth are admittedly foreign to me; I have never been aware of any extraterrestrial life, and while I have received occasional reports from my messengers of yōkai born from the spirits of sunken ships, the origin of these aquatic invaders appears to be more complicated. I admire the Commander's ability to work with people of so many different cultures and nationalities at a time when they were so recently pitted against each other. It bodes well for the effectiveness of his military force and the ability of the Planetary Defence Corps to reconcile differences between the various nations under its banner. I myself have no military experience, but he seems to be the right man for the job. He has my support, though I suppose it cannot be known if his protection of Earth's inhabitants would extend to its non-human natives like myself."

"Communism is post-apocalyptic? Yeah, I can buy that. It sure feels like the world's ended. You don't get fifty kids willing to punch, kick, and scream for change unless things are really bad, no matter how good they look. It's just the veneer of progress, of prosperity, right? Frankly, I think the world ended either with the first stock investor or the first landlord. Not sure which.

"I'm not so sure, though, if your aggressive apoliticism can work. You can't just ignore the trees that have fallen in the road. They're still there, no matter how hard you ignore them! They're in the way! They need to be removed, and things need to be changed! If it means chopping down every tree or rewriting the weather so there's no storms, so be it!

"That's all metaphorical. Don't actually get rid of rain, it's important.

"I like the cut of drift, Kotera. I am likewise for me, for myself, and for I. Why bother with the illusion of politics and government? It's all just a ploy by the useless class to use us, the real men, the real thinkers and makers and doers. But what a shame. It looks like you took all that potential and became a hermit instead of a master. Why let it all go to waste? Forget prose. Be like me, and seize power—the power that I deserve to have as one of the only real men in the world!"

"Humanity above all, what a double edged statement. Sure it is meant to rally those who are too afraid to fight but it also creates your nation to be the very monsters you are set out to destroy.

Just imagine, when a species far weaker than your own reaches out for assistance and your xenophobic people take them out without a second thought. All because humanity is above all.

But im not saying you would let that happen, you see some souls are consumed by fear, and some souls are blinded by rage. And the scars people carry could last a lifetime.

Even looking at you, I see such a fire burning inside you, I would love to spar with you, see just how much that rage can fuel a sword.

And besides that negative first bit, you do put your life on the line for your people and they do follow you, so you have my respect." -Luden
