I think that's the first time in a year or two I've had my attention immediately drawn to a guitar solo.

I've had more times in the last year with being impressed with guitar solo's then my entire lifetime:P Because my music has expanded a lot within the last year since I got Spotify, and joined the music discussions.

I think it's kinda the opposite for me. My musical tastes have expanded too but they've kind of gone in a direction away from guitar solos. It's sad because when I was younger I absolutely loved hearing good guitar solos. Now there's very few I like and for the most part they feel like an interruption.

Benediction, Current 93.

we, unlike the bourgeoisie, have nothing to lose and therefore our expression will be the only honest one, our words will be the only challenging ones and our art will be the one revolutionary expression. We need new noise and new voices and new canvases to become something more than the last poets of a useless generation.

I think mine mainly has to do with the fact I've expanded more into the rock and metal realm (Porcupine Tree, which has a lot of good guitar solo's. and so on), and I've expanded more away from the mellow stuff. Though, at the same time, there's still mellow stuff I'm discovering quite often too, but I've just added a lot of upbeat, more metal-like stuff in the last year then I used to listen to. I used to not care much for metal at all, so I never really explored it. Apparently I was just listening to the wrong stuff, because there's a fair amount of metal, or metal-mixed stuff that I like now. Though, things like Celtic Frost's "Dying God Coming Into Human Flesh" I've always liked, along with some Tool.

Yeah. That name just gives off a very loving, and caring impression, doesn't it? Like they really do love people.

Honestly, sometimes I quite agree with the song name....
