"I have to give a lot of credit to Dmitri. There are a lot of views and policies that I can agree with when it comes to his rule. One very small thing that I would like to query on him is his view on religion. I can see where he is going when it comes to religion itself, it is not really something that he wishes for anyone in his nation to be held back by. But I do have to wonder about his opinion on foreign nations following such or even those deities who wish to communicate with him on friendly terms. Other than that, everything else he does is very positive. His decisions to run a state regulated capitalist economy is a great move, considering what can happen if the free market is left unchecked. I also quite like his ideas on victimless crimes, putting those who have committed such into rehabilitation. And of course, my favorite view when it comes to leaders, is that he respects the environment. Dimitri is a great leader, and I would certainly love to work with him in the future should the opportunity ever arise. Perhaps there may be a few ideas for my own nation that I could learn from him as well.

And then sometimes I'm reminded what happens when you don't have that order and half a continent gets taken over by anarchic idiots. Ok, look, I vaguely understand that half that continent was already overtaken by anarchic poisoner idiots, but that doesn't make the present situation much better. So, the Overboss...I feel like that title is mocking me, by the way, but regardless...he's supposed to be a good fighter, charismatic, and a professional waster of everybody's time. That's not a good quality in a leader. Though fortunately, that set of traits does make him very likely to die of an overdose or in battle or something. Probably both at the same time. Kind of hard to shoot straight when you're poisoning yourself all the time. Anyway, if you couldn't guess, my opinion is negative on the so-called "Sky Reavers" and their leader. If you're going to conquer a bunch of divided territories prone to chaos, the least you can do is actually offer order!"

How is it that despite regretting killing a man in a duel, you continue to duel for sport? You could just admit to yourself that you get a sense of satisfaction seeing someone proven inferior to your strength, that besting them in combat gives you a rush that can only be replicated in proper combat. But you wouldn't want that. Why would a king who tries to be just ever admit to himself that he enjoys the hunt? At least you show enough courtesy to kill an enemy king before he can be devoured alive. Maybe you wanted the satisfaction of killing him yourself...but eh, what do I know? I'm just an observer."

"Sera's economic policy reminds me of the folly of the Socialist Commonwealth. While she at least nationalizes large enterprises, Sera has created a paternalistic economy dependent on a bloated welfare state. A system that only could sustain itself due to its low population. Her sense of 'equality' is every citizen being an equal dependent to her rule.

I don't really see the capitalism in her system, since apparently wage labor is nonexistent. This ironically makes her state more socialist than the so-called Socialist Commonwealth. Still, her socialism lacks the spirit of liberty that pursues the full liberation of the working man.

Why follow the paternalism of a single leader? Especially in a state with that small of a population. I can easily see Platinia adopting a form of direct democracy, considering how developed the citizenry are. Frankly, her rulership is obsolete at this point.

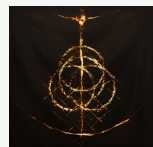

I guess at least she doesn't alienate the majority population like how the Socialist Commonwealth did in their pursuit of 'equality'.

"Of course, you are worthy to rule. Especially if you managed to seize power without any bloodshed, that's pretty impressive in my opinion. Also it's the ideal for any person of sound mind to avoid harming another. Despite Cassidy from what I recall of him, not exactly being the most sound of mind when you look at his politics and disliking for a specific group of human beings. But still, if he got to power without killing his predecessor there is some worth, emphasis on some to be exact. Otherwise, it's a pleasure to meet you Luden. Constantine Sein Lin Zaw Naing: Oh hey, it's that guy who called me a tyrant! Oh nah, I am not holding a grudge on that, why would I? You made it clear on what you meant, and I was just talking about how we first met. Ahh, good times. Wait, that was a week ago, too early to reminisce. Anyway, how have you been, my friend? I always have a thing for Greek folks, you know? You guys have quite a lot of philosophy going on, and I really do enjoy reading the classics now and then. I also do love a person who does not take himself too seriously, and those comedic plays are an epitome! Tell me, are you familiar with the works of someone called... Shakespeare? I can't blame you if you don't know him, he is way after your time. But seeing how this world works, I could share some of his work with you, and you can then participate and share his wit! Anyway, I am positive on you! We should come back soon and talk again, you know? Rarely do I see someone as nice as you outside of my world. All I mostly get are crazy people who wanted to watch the world burn. I want to dominate the world, but at least I have generous goals!
