"The king is a strong, cultured individual, with all the makings of a great ruler to be remembered for ages. His military strength and patronage of the arts perfectly balances these aspects of a society; thus, his empire is slated to be neither overly militant nor too complacent. Perhaps I am biased, seeing as his empire is set in what appears to be an alternate past, and I live in 2020.

"It is fascinating that he practices Christianity as a Roman king; I am curious to see how this will affect his society. I do hope that he and his children live long, prosperous lives, and that they love and respect one another dearly."

Oswald's Mood: Slight Consideration

"I don't go after a leader's personal life but I will say this one thing—this updated information regarding his depressive mental health does make me understand his excessive drinking, if I am correct. I admit I was harsh on the king for his drunkenness, I did not know the reason behind it was really him going through depression. Elisabeth may not be present at the moment but I imagine she would be empathetic towards him."

The Kingdom of Tetchland

An almost-absolute Catholic monarchy that seceded from Sweden during the Reformation. It's something of a Western Hong Kong (pre-2019), being a small, densely-populated urban region that enjoys wide economic freedoms, modern amenities, and wealth, but holds a strong dedication to tradition with regards to religion, military, and national pride. It's on a small, fictional archipelago halfway between Sweden and Poland.

Still, I oppose his economic liberalism, especially in regard with wages, along with his monarchism. Really, he is everything I hate about the old Republican Party except worse due to his monarchism. A small island doesn't even need a strong centralized government anyways. I would support direct democracy and the control of Tetchland by its working class population.

On an another note, I do support mandatory arms ownership."

immortality from the means of supercomputers and virtual worlds. Fascinating, and something that some of the Valentian citizens have done and are doing as of now. That is all good and well. I usually try my best not to talk about politics, because of how divisive it is. As for this man, I believe that while he might have disdain towards some nationalities, he perhaps mean well. That is as much as I can say, and I hope not to comment too much further. His wife could definitely be a Valentian with that height, but unfortunately for everyone involved, we have doubled our heights recently. It kind of makes visits to other counties much more difficult, but hey, that's what synthetic bodies are for. Well, still neutral on him. I wish him all the best, but admittedly, I am not warming up to him, not just yet.

I see that she has obtained a health report from the Zitragradians, another group of close friends that we have the pleasure of knowing. Overall, I am positive on you as someone we talk to on a professional level, along with as a friend! I wish you all the best in everything you do, and hey, do take care of yourself. It's a rather dangerous world out there, no matter how prepared we are! I have to go, for now.

As a non-elected leader, I doubt I'd be approved of, though I bet "Red" Ruğa would appreciate that we have an elective Parliament. That is, of course, the only upside to our Parliament, which I am often convinced is secretly controlled by children."

I hope that does not come out wrong, but basically, the man needs quite a bit of serious help, and I wonder if the Valentians can do something about it. A little bit of an alcoholic, and it does not help by the viral outbreak that they seem to be getting. Fascinating, though still, all the while serious. I am rather slightly positive on him, since this is the first time we have met each other, but I have a good feeling about him!

"Holy shit, this guy has a lotta names, but doesn't everyone in VZ? In this case, I'm just gonna call him Marcus. The President seems pragmatic, and I like those type of people. He is able to gain the trust of his people, which is something most don't truly have. His position as a mediator between the statists and anarchists is good, as it has been shown. His implementation of social welfare policies and applying science to everyday life shows he has a brain, unlike some.

I believe his policies may work rather well in the modern world, since they worked in his. At the same time, I think he just got lucky. I mean, if you make the taxes way too high, a lot won't like it, and you get what you've been tryna prevent: instability. Happened before and gonna happen again. Whatever negative opinion I have of him is countered by his eradication of cancer and other stuff. Last, but certainly not least, his egalitarian beliefs align with mine pretty well, so I have to say my opinion is very positive."

"Too lazy to write any flavors on top of this post, come back later" wrote Le Patron with great boredom.

"There's a certain duality of man which emanates from Alisa I. No doubt that women make cruel leaders. They're heartless when they're given their way. Think of Catherine de Medicis, Catherine of Russia, Elizabeth I of England. And the Falklands Governor Thatcher for Thatcherism Alisa I is an interesting individual who straddles the line between absolute cruelty and benevolence. The lynching, the shootings, and the beheadings. Yet no amount of movie acts and virus relief funds could absolve her of her cruelty."

"All I could say is for you to embrace the insanity and let the bipolarism grow wider and wider to the point that there is no absolute Alisa. I prefer to embrace the Alisa who threw glass at a servant. Let your people know who is the Alpha lest they would grow bold in snubbing you. You want attention? Then go kill people. That would rile up some puritans."

The Avant-Gardist State of Patagonia ~~~ Gauchos and Mapuches, orgies and parties, avant-garde art, futurism, syndicalism, the New Man, general strikes, the glorification of violence, spiritual nationalism, esoteric occultism, CIA spooks, Spartanian homosexuality, public sodomy, and more

Triomphe du Surréalisme (1968)

- There are many things said about Patagonia but few actually know what goes on behind the Andes mountains. Tales of human depravation and man's inner darkest self run wild. A place where avant-garde culture flourish and the artist don't fear the censor. Where all live bold and free under the gaze of the Patron. Yet all dreams will come to an end soon...
- Not expecting an essay. Just a couple of sentences that shows that you know my work well enough
