The Majilis are almost half communist.

Very unfortunate.

The government of Ursch is an autocracy led by the tyrant Kalagann. Below the Autokrat are the four Spatas, each of which oversees one of the "corners" of the empire, acting as army chiefs and government officials, essentially being "mini-autokrats". These Spatas typically act as the military's generals when needed. Another post-apocalyptic autocracy.

Ursch is an autocracy ruled by an "Autokrat", though there is smaller governance in the form of Spatas, each of which oversees one of the "corners" of the empire, acting as army chiefs and government officials, essentially being "mini-autokrats"

AN: There are seven Parties in the Duckocracy, and apart from the token "Humanist" one, the rest are all themed after rubber duckies or ducks. I half expected to see a Daffy Duck Party in there somewhere.

Yeah when I was thinking about making the legion I was going to go for something less copy and paste from FNV, but making sometimes these things get the better of you. I guess that's why I've got multiple kingdoms in this.

That the fictional nations featured in NS issues (Brasilistan, Marche Noire, ect) actually exist in their canon.
