I was falling behind on turning it into a PDF for viewing but hey I save 59 pages.

As a disclaimer, I am not particularly targeting anyone in F7 to save what may be their not-very-best moments; I used to (and still am) archiving threads that are noteworthy before they die. The stuff I have archived have my own angry moments, if that helps. 😊

I've long ago lost any faith I have in the F7 community considering that literally twice the mods have had to crackdown and ban the popular chill/chat location pseudo-RP threads because y'all can't help yourselves and inevitably use those threads for erotic and sexual roleplaying.

Ah, no rules RP, it was fun there, if Ashotu were not to act like a complete and Utter a-hole and make shit hit the fan.

And I also don't think if this is true, but The King Isle only posts only one to two paragraphs in their posts over at International Incidents, I cannot say for sure if he could be considered a summer-poster, but his posts do share characteristics with the typical "one-paragraph" guy that you all might have encountered in F7 or the forums in general.

Let's just stop using summie as a euphemism and call them what they are. Low effort posters who only want to RP war and can't even do that outside of a super abstract "I send 100,000 troops here."

If i remember correctly, a long time ago we had a wave of "slavers wars" in II, then came the "Pony wars", and last (i think) were the "Communist wars", i feel i'm forgetting some waves, but that made me think if, in the future, we would see a "Pony wars" second wave, or just "Humans vs Xenos" wave.

I feel like we've long moved past bronies being the target of ire on the internet.

They're just like...part of the internet community now. Sure you'll still get some people who hate them but I think most people are just like who cares anymore?

Just out of curiosity: were they ponies declaring war on the human race or people who wanted to attack the ponies, even though they are not on planet Earth?

Is complicated. Those wars happened between Earth nations that were invaded and conquered by ponies (those events were called "Pony revolutions", i don't know why) and nations that just wanted to exterminate them because..

ATM it's just a slaver war, then there's the cold war between KTO and GCN with GCN still trying desperately to grab as many people as possible RP-wise... Which is not a good idea when people are starting to wise up.

That or a sheer lack of interest.

Aside from that, yea, it's just another wave of slavers trying to godmod their way out of easy defeats in II.

I wish there were more people who RPed to tell a story and not just trying to godmod their way to victory. But that's how it has always been as long as I've been here and why I haven't done any noteworthy RP with my nation. And I fully admit if I try to run my own RP I lose motivation fast.
