Oh I definitely agree with those.

Which is why every dictatorship I've come up with generally isn't all that evil, just a sucky place to live or is batshit insane (Idoho).

Speaking about Idoho the nation really doesn't fit most of these.

- The government is a convoluted mess where technically the president has complete and absolute authority but in reality it's the three different committees that run the nation.
- This is probably the only one Idoho really does fit as it's kinda modeled after a best Korea, mixed with Iran that's run by a Christian sect that makes the WBC look like saints.
- kinda hits the trope kinda doesn't.
- Definitely not
- Most definitely not. The entire nation of Idoho is a backwater Island that limits contact to the outside world and only has enough military force to defend the nation for three months tops. The economy is quite literally in the shitter. And the security forces are too busy trying to harass the citizens to worry about things like military training.

Mechyrdia isn't a dictatorship, it's a liberal democracy, so I'm going to do this with another country in Mechyrdia lore instead: Fulkreykk!

Always an absolutist state where the leader has complete and total control over every aspect of the nation

Not true in the First Fulkreyksk Authoritariat, only somewhat true in the Second Fulkreyksk Authoritariat. In fact, during the First Authoritariat, the Thedish Assembly (the legislature of Fulkreykk) kicked Jorh Kamas out of his position as Forarr (the head of state of Fulkreykk) because he launched an invasion of the Drakhassi Federation that ended in disaster.

If not some generic 'evil empire', is thematically based on Nazi Germany, North Korea, or the Soviet Union

Thematically it's based on Adam Dressler's German Reich from that old Hoi4 mod, an alt-hist where Germany lost World War 1. But much of the aesthetic of paganism is stripped away and replaced with an aesthetic of high science - which fits Fulkreykk's ideology. Hence the valknut being colored in RGB.

Even if they're thematically based on a RL dictatorship, may or may not actually ideologically match or be similar to the RL dictatorship, but would often rather just be generically 'evil' and 'oppressive'

Fulkreykk isn't generically evil and oppressive, far from it. Their whole government is centered around the ideology of Witenskafstraeging, or "science governance". Originally, the vision of Vrankenn Kassck (the founder of Fulkreykk) was that the government would be controlled by scientific knowledge. However, under the later rule of Praethoris Khorr, that would be inverted, so that Fulkreykk, for much of its existence, operates under the fact that scientific knowledge is controlled by government.

Will make threads/posts to show off how 'evil' they are and how much they oppress their citizens, but it always comes off as tryhard and edgy

Yeah no, I don't do this.

MILITARY IS SUPREME. Tons of factbooks and shit about their military (which is, of course, always the greatest military power imaginable) and little about anything else

I think I have exactly one factbook that could be called a military factbook about Fulkreykk, and its a gallery of 3d ship models.

Deadass it sometimes feels like y'all think 'having a nation that isn't in a crapsack world on the verge of total collapse or is otherwise total hell to live in' is a bad thing.

Like honestly the world is already fucked up as it is, just let me imagine a better world instead of a worse one tbh.

There's nothing wrong with what your saying but it's more the realistic part of things where you'll have a nation where everything is so perfect and nothing bad ever happens or has happened.

Like your own lore has Gandoor going through a civil war and being under a dictatorship. There's got to be some sort of scars that aren't fixed yet.

And that's the thing, you don't need to have a hell hole but you need to have some sort of broken things to drive the story. Because that's what I view this all as, that we are telling a story. And if your story has always been perfect and has never changed than that's a boring story.

It's more interesting to read a story where a nation goes from waging cultural genocide to being more accepting of other cultures. Just saying that the nation has always been accepting would be kind of boring

That's kinda what I was getting at.

There's nothing wrong with "nice" or even "utopian" nations when there's at least some backstory as to how they got there. It's ludicrous to imagine that there's a utopia-style nation out there that has never struggled internally or externally, or has no interesting history to write about.

Honestly I just get uncomfortable when trying to write about more 'realistic' bad stuff that's happened in my nation's lore, that's why my wiki article for the Native Gandoorese genocide is so small.

Like it's part of the lore and I feel like I should expand on it beyond just 'yeah the colonizers committed genocide against the native people of Gandoor' in threads about bad things that have happened in your nation or whatever, but I think y'all can understand why I get a bit uncomfortable writing about genocide (even if it is fictional).

I included a part about the genocide, which was 100% of the two Monke species, the Monke and Gorilla Sapiens. However it is portrayed more as a war/righteous path of extermination, and isn't like a kind of camp style.

OK does anyone else get mildly annoyed when other players get extremely basic things about your nation's lore wrong?

Like I'm talking about shit as basic as 'using the wrong demonym for your nation's citizens' or 'referring to your nation's leader by a title they don't have' here.

I guess it depends. If they did something like call my leader empress then I wouldn't mind much, even though she is clearly called queen every time she has been mentioned, but if they give a title that seem far off than yeah. Same with demonym. Like of the called my citizens "Sky Citadelians" instead of "Hawk People", it would be wrong but understandable.

- Always an absolutist state where the leader has complete and total control over every aspect of the nation

"As the absolute monarch of the Hawk People, she can do whatever she wants, or at least she says she can." is purposefully meant to point out how leaders, even as absolute monarchs, usually aren't as powerful as people like to portray them as.

I mean, technically all groups, even non state ones, are nations, as nation on nationstates refers to the individual account, like ask ABOVE NATION, etc.
