I do not understand the spirits of this box. They do not smell, they do not speak to me, and they do not live. Yet the box speaks, and the box lives...
He sniffs Supercomputer Tom.

...but the box does not smell, either. It possesses the spirit of a naked-one, but it is not a naked-one. It has the goals of naked-ones, and it believes in the naked-god. It builds the Serpent system like the naked-ones, and it even leads all the lands of naked-ones; the naked-ones allow the box to guide them; can they guide themselves?

Yet the box is not a naked-one... it never was a naked-one. Perhaps the box stole the spirit of a naked-one. We must release it! We must smash the box, for it has kidnapped a spirit, and it has tortured the spirit!

We must smash the box! SMASH. THE. BOX. SMASH. THE. BOX. SMASH. THE. BOX.

He begins to hit Supercomputer Tom with a very heavy stick.

"Miss Ari, I'm very pleased we are not neighbors, if that weren't the case we probably wouldn't be on good terms. But what else can I say? I can't judge you entirely for clinging on to the lifestyle which has sustained your ancestors for countless generations. To a certain extent, your lifestyle is probably more sustainable than my own, more meaningful even in the way man relates to objects. However I consider it is a matter of time until your materially primitive lifestyle gets the better of your people when it comes to facing outside threats."

This naked-one is of four spirits? That is... unearthly. The Dreams of this one must be truly amazing; with a story like his, as long as his, the spirits within must be as old as Potonini himself!

He is wise, also, but his dance is strange - it must be the fault of the metalgod that possessed him. It is a sad fate, and a tragic one even for a naked-one. I don't even know if he is a naked-one anymore. Perhaps taken-one, or lost-one. Possessed-one. His people have suffered, and he has suffered the most of them; damn the Serpent-God!

"The monke fears the future and seeks to turn back time. It has rightly seen the horrors that civilisation and all its mechanisms have unleashed upon the world, but the solution it offers is to crawl back into the dark, fleeing from the harsh realities of the light. This will not work. It has never worked. Throughout history, reactionaries have sought to hold back progress, or to turn back the clock entirely. They may have enjoyed some momentary success from time to time, but eventually they are always swept away by the tide of change. No, we cannot go back. We can only determine which way we go forwards, to paradise or perdition."

Le Patron reached his hand to the sky as he could see a divine apparition. A figure made out of holy light and a being of large stature. The figure extended his hairy hand and that's how Le Patron realize it's Monke. Tears rolled in his eye for he is now able to grasp monke and bask in all of his glory... But it was all just a dream but a dream may be, at the very least he could see monke for himself.

"I love you, o' Wawakanini! O' son of nature and dream scribe! Blessed upon thee who has returned to nature and embraced monke! I've slaved away my entire life for this moment - the Futurist Revolution and seizing Patagonia. Indulging in senseless hedonism and violence but never finding inner satisfaction. But I was wrong and the Futurist Revolution is nothing but a smokescreen for the naked-man's trampling upon blessed nature. O' monke, let us dance in the skies and fall deep into our dreams."

Except maybe several reports of fishermen being attacked by some folks on rafts, armed with bows and spears. Nothing a good ol' shotgun can't handle!

But he might become less violent and cruel, which is actually awesome! Then again, there are many factions in Surrealist Patagonia, only Patron can control, and if they go outta control - Then situation of Charlie-Foxtrot class may happen in this region. But then, we will be able to intervene, conquer the territory and establish a solid foothold and our base of operations on the continent.
