Their current president, Okja Nerkutoa, has been a member of the ruling Communist Party of Kergstan since 16 years old. He joined the party after being inspired by his saviour from drowning, a volunteer of the CPK; after he was saved, the volunteer refused his thanks as they saw the act as a civic socialist duty, and instead encouraged him to join the party.

It is interesting to note that that would be present-day China would be slightly more fragmented and regionalistic - in this case, Nacrad represents the Hakka, Min, Teochew and Cantonese peoples.

It is also rather Westernized and democratic norms, while still with some of its flaws, are more evolved in Nacrad than its neighbours. Western culture is most evident in their Anglicised names, which I assume are a norm in the country seeing that their leaders have very Anglicized names.

I haven't, and I'm not sure what this is in reference to. I'd be interested in hearing about it.

Slavic Scientists' Day is a national holiday, so the nation has a holiday to honor scientists, which is neat.

Marsoslovakia was founded by Slavic colonists on Mars leaving Earth following its near-destruction in nuclear warfare, which decimated larger Slavic nations like Russia, Poland and Ukraine but not smaller ones like the Czechs, Serbs, Slovaks, and Slovenes.

Their territory is scattered with pockets in Northern Europe, Western Africa, and Central Asia. At a small scale, society is made up of dense urban communes. A duke and scientists/engineers rule over each of the three main areas, and two "democratic, socialist minarchist" emperors rule over the whole country.
