Has anyone done that before tho? My nation has loads of different PMCs and militias with different motivations and I was actually thinking having different Qhevastian groups on opposite sides of a conflict might be interesting.

Remember when that cat spammer tried to act like Freed Lymonia was yet another victim of the mods and their unjust oppression as opposed to 'user who got their ass permabanned from the game because it was blatantly obvious to everyone that they had no plans to follow the rules because they would literally keep doing exactly what made them lose previous nations/get temp bans as soon as they made a new account/their ban expired?

That I unfortunately don't remember. :/ I have vague memories, but not a lot, damn. But I won't be surprised that it happened. 🤔

Hi 😊

On the flip side, there are lots of Tsaral Russian nations. Especially on some RP maps it feels like it's half 19th century East European Slavic but with modern technology.

Ahh, we got a whole lot of those. Tsarist Russian, USSR, German Empire, WW2 German (can be Nazi, can be another flavor), and a whole nine yards!

Of course, a good number of them do have creative ideas and I am not the one to judge, but that's just the trend I am seeing (and eventually these nations tend to CTE often).

The uncreative NS dictatorship starter pack:

- Blatantly inspired by/is literally Nazi Germany or the USSR under Stalin, depending if the player wants to be a far-right or far-left dictatorship
- If they're a right-wing dictatorship, flag will have a symbol that is almost but not 100% a swastika, to get around the ban on usage of swastikas in Nazi-related contexts; left-wing dictatorships will just have the hammer and sickle and maybe a red star
- Expect lots of gratuitous German for right-wing dictatorships and gratuitous Russian for left-wing ones
- Factbooks are almost entirely focused on their nation's military, with little information about their nation's governing structure and how their dictator actually enforces their rule
- Their IC posts seem to give the vibe that they're trying to make their nation the most cartoonishly evil nation ever, even though real dictators, as bad as they are, are typically not just cartoon villains that are blatantly evil
- 'This nation DOES NOT represent my real views!' disclaimer in the sig

Firstly, I didn't even know this site existed
Secondly, I fit none of the above, yay :dab:

Personally, I would add Caliphates to the 'Axis of Evil' and make Number 5 'Anglosphere nation with limited-to-no flaws'. But it's still cool regardless.

I am learning so much about media beyond NS today.

I'm honestly a little bit embarrassed that I never checked for a NS reddit despite how much time I spend on reddit in the first place...

I mean your sig outright says you're a parody, so obviously you're exempt from this, I'm more talking about the ones who are doing it completely seriously without a hint of irony.

The NS subreddit is honestly pretty lame.

99% of the posts there are just 'Check out my nation' or 'How do I do this?' and that's it.

Reddits are a hit or miss. I don't mind r/NationStates, but to be very honest, I didn't really participate because I mean... we can talk here, can't we?

That, and other bigger Reddits mean you WILL get swept, so I usually just read and forget.
