Depends on what the goods are that you are selling, but usually it wouldn't be a criminal matter - rather it would be a civil manner that could see the legal patent owner sue you and your whole family for every penny you've got.

Smuggling a gun for profit with no previous convictions would mean 1 year in prison and a lifetime ban from owning firearms.

If you had previous non-violent, non-firearms related convictions, 18 months and a ban.

If you had previous violent, non-firearms related convictions, 3 years and a ban.

If you had previous violent, firearms related convictions, 5 years and a ban.

Smuggling it with intent to harm someone with no previous convictions would mean 3 years and a ban.
If you had previous non-violent, non-firearms related convictions, 4 years and a ban.
If you had previous violent, non-firearms related convictions, 6 years and a ban.
If you had previous violent, firearms related convictions, 6 years and a ban but no parole.

If you were under the influence of alcohol, you could lose 1 year off the sentence.
If you were under the influence of hard drugs, you would have a year added, because, well, drugs.
If you were under the influence of both, it'd cancel out.

If you had a life limiting condition or disability, you'd get the same sentence for house arrest instead of prison.
If you were mentally ill, you'd get 2 years taken off the sentence and possible house arrest depending on the circumstances.

What is your country's punishment for identity fraud?

Entirely depends if the person willed it or not as if the medical staff did that without the patients or patients closest relatives consent then it is entirely illegal but if it is to their consent then it's perfectly fine

Uh this might be sensitive but "CP" if you know what i mean

This should be perfectly legal to do, however doing so is pretty damn hard, not a lot of doctors are willing to carry this out.

Re: Converting shed into gas-chamber.
Not a crime as long as it is self-contained and used for lawful purposes (vermin and pests -- not humans, livestock, or other people's pets).
The crime is in using it criminally.
Examples:
>>>Homicide -- death penalty (and shed is destroyed)
>>>Illegal death of livestock or pet -- 1 year hard labor per incident that can be served concurrently, fined 5 x cost of animals 3/5 which goes to aggrieved parties). And shed is destroyed.
>>>Creating a nuisance (the gas leaks out making neighbors sick. Fined 5x cost of medical treatment, destruction of shed).

Hijacking your leader's yacht or equivalent and declaring it an independent country?
