To briefly answer that question:

SVP/SPP - A socialist, pro taxation and public sector-based economy party. They believe in the responsible integration of migrants and high foreign spending on other nations. Responsible for the autarky and diesel-free vehicle policies.

GR - Strong supporter of SVP, especially with the policies said above. Attempts to install legislations protecting natural resources, environmental consciousness, and regulations in the industry sector.

DEM/DK and LP - Also leftist, but more interested in a capitalist industry and profit-gaining sectors, along with (somewhat) less authoritarianism and government presence. Often submit legislations for more civil and political freedom, though both are already considered high in the country.

SP - Centrist, mainly serving the purpose to add seats to the two major sides, even if they're both geared to the left. Citizens often support for party for specific policies and goals in mind, especially when they're against some of those from the socialist and liberal-democrat parties.

KO - The only major conservative party. Basically against most ideals of the polar-opposite SVP, and focusses either on a higher presence of spirituality, more civil freedoms, and more national heritage conservation, but this list is just for the basics.
