There are two people: the ones who sell cards, and the ones who don't. I assume the two sides are stuck in some sorta endless gang war due to their opposing ideologies.

As can be expected of alien species, many of the beings they know are not compatible or even remotely similar to a "humanoid" in shape or chemical composition and are all products of vastly different evolutionary processes.

Good news everyone! WW2 ended early! Bad news everyone!
There's a four-way Cold War now!

There's always a caveat!

Edit: I will add a lot more later, I thought this was the sigs thread.
Oops!

Edit 2: So I learned that their Nekos' population demographic has a 1:6 ratio, with the six going to the ladies. They talk about the lack of Y-chromosome and there were speculations. Makes me wonder on their reproduction system, not in a NSFW way, mind you. Actually makes me wonder if they have to reproduce through other means, such as mitosis, or laying eggs and letting the Male Nekos do their thing. Not that you need to answer them! I'm just leaving this up for speculation as well!

Their leader's parents were executed by the Nazis for refusal to collaborate with them. Also, Svoboda later in his life as the Le Patron of Patagonia would attempt to bring about all-out nuclear war... which seemed to have failed judging from the violent balkanization of his masterpiece.

The Cala for Plainsrider appears to operate in more of a support role for the larger Caleshan than the rest, given how she's both older than the rest, married with children, and a self-described servant, an unusual mindset for a society that seems to thrive on competition. I'd imagine the system's broken down a little bit with her, and her people are too in love with her to toss her out the window. That, or she's really damn good at supply and logistics.

Today, I learned that only 61.8% of Nachtblume citizens are native. This is due to quite laid-back immigration regulations and high living standards that'll obviously attract those seeking for better opportunities for themselves. Also, there country had experienced a scientific revolution at some of their history.
