I mean, we can actually create a mathematical definition for evolution in terms of the evolutionary algorithm and then write code to deal with abstract instances of evolution, which basically equates to mathematical proof that evolution works. All that remains is to show that biological systems replicate in such a way as to satisfy the minimal criteria required for evolution to apply to them, something which has already been adequately shown time and again. At this point, we've pretty much proven that not only can evolution happen, it pretty much must happen since it's basically impossible to prevent it from happening.

You on a music listening spree?

I kind of died down with my music listening again, because I started doing lots of gaming again, but I'm trying to kick up the pace some more and get through some of these TONS of metal bands with lots of songs I'm behind on, that might even get farther behind if I end up adding more...

Well, I mostly play games where I can turn the game's own volume down (TF2, The Sims 2, AoE III) and keep music playing on the background. And as I said, I'll listen my whole library through, so there will be long, long periods where my posts are from the same band with different song.
