They are absurdly, comically huge, controlling approximately 41,400,000 km². For reference, the largest empire in history, the British Empire, controlled a measly 35,500,000 km², which was only 24% of the Earth's total land area. However, despite their enormous size, they are only home to 425 million people.

For such a large nation, they contain surprisingly few federal subdivisions. However, judging by their names, some of their subdivisions appear to have subdivisions of their own

That the Pan-Asiatic States is a member of the World Assembly, and is owed a seat in the Security Council as well (Whether or not a "permanent and temporary" seat mechanic exists in their world's version of the Security Council is not explained). Also, that apparently the German Empire and Republican/Democratic Germany both exist in their universe.
