Furthermore, the fact that she is willing to serve until the very concept of death took her away. I quite like that. I mean, it does sound like a Benevolent Dictator for Life, but what use is voting for someone who's an absolute fool? Problem not with democracy, I will admit.. problem with lack of vetting. I do wonder how her world will be like if the nuclear war went on- perhaps it's best not to think about it too deep. More problems with her rather loose-lipped nature, one in particular about "Foreign rats" and chemical warfare. I shudder of the world where she takes over the Valentians.

That man is a living god. He is just awesome. I mean he does what he does and he is a military man. If Nemias abandones his christianity nonsense and proclaims himself a god of his own right I would admire him even more. Eitherway - he knows how to run a nation and love him or hate him he has killed 30 million people and you have not.

“Ah, Tove Gormsdottir, the Queen of Kjalaara. She does seem like the admirable leader, and I admire many of her policies that would help her people out. However, I think she has been much more successful in the military. Being an Army General, I am very much interested when leaders have also served in the military, and Queen Tove is no exception, given her 18 years of military service and the multiple conflicts she engaged in as Commander in Chief have been very impressive. I especially admire her role in the Great Ice March offensive and the bravery she possessed during it. I laud her for her military service, and do genuinely think she is a great military hero. I don't have a lot to say about her leadership of her country, however, but again, I think the policies she implemented seemed to be pretty effective. So, there's that.”

I find him to be quite fascinating, despite being very conservative, he desegregated humans and anthros. However, the LGBT community do not need to be executed. The only people who deserve to be executed are those who are a threat to the status quo, like fascists, or communists, or monarchists, or religious people. And besides, we in huff mania are beyond having criminal's lives being in vain. I find that turning them into test subjects is an overall betterment for society. That way, even the deaths of criminals will not be in vain

From what we've gathered on her. She seems to value militarization. Don't get me wrong, the military is important for the security of a nation, but people always seem to forget that intelligence plays a big part too. Now, I might be biased because i used to work for as an officer for the IIB when I was in college, but my point is that information and knowledge is extremely important and we will do anything to get it.

And they don't necessarily produce completely idiotic result 100% of the time. Of course, such caveat has been demonstrated to not apply today, for she has wasted away her opportunity and brought her nation back to the days of backwards, boneheaded, religious ideological mania, completely blind to the realities of the world, and heck to the wishes of the people it claims it represents."

"Indeed, the mainstream media of all people are largely correct in their appraisalment of hers. I guess that says something."

AFRIKAN STAAT

It is an apocalyptic total war of survival. A death crusade between two forces: that of the White race against the Serpent. Only one side will win and inherit all of Africa, for the other will be utterly and completely annihilated.

Francois S. D'Chautee

"Jonathan Simon Whitefall, or 'Prime Minister Kindley', or even 'Lord Kindley', is, how shall I put this, an interesting man to say the least? His life is brilliantly detailed in an article by Cape Town's Southern Daily Herald, and it is a story of both hope and strife. War and peace. From what I have gathered from the information presented, he has had a lot to deal with in his life, I would consider a 'lot' to be an understatement actually. He's done much for the ahem, 'colored folk' of the Afrikan Staat, and while things seemed to go well for a while. Things would take a turn for the worst in due time. After a long period of great reform for his nation, his daughter

Alice Kindley, tragically passed in a nuclear blast that detonated right in the middle of Cape Town, portrayed by Caliph Moammar al-Gaddafi. Rousing both the nation and the, ahem, 'colored-folk' to an extreme extent. Such a blow to Kindley would, well, greatly change things for the foreseeable future, and there would be an absurd amount of racially motivated violence, pretty much war, really, in the remnants of Cape Town and throughout the rest of the Afrikan Staat. Now, normally I would keep my opinion strictly to the leader in question, however, I felt it was pertinent to bring up a information regarding Lord Kindley, he is a complicated man to say the least, but not an incompetent leader, he was given a challenging task, and it resulted in the unthinkable. I am a cold man, I will admit that, but I feel pity that he lost his daughter, and at such a young age, too. I do not have children of my own, but I feel for him in my own way. To be at the forefront of a race war, and that in which may cause the very genocide of either side, I respect his determination to push through and fight for his nation, to fight for his people, even after such tragedy had befallen him, if only other leaders were as determined and showed such strength as he does, at such a young age, too! It's quite shocking, to say the least. One final thing that I will bring up, is that his

shows
great promise
under his rule, that is,
however, if

times.
Godspeed
to you,

explaining why war is good

Ah, a fellow authoritarian ruler whose power comes from his birth! Peace be upon you, as well as prosperity for your subjects! That being said, I have to say that there is but one point on which I cannot wholeheartedly agree with you- war. I understand that each and every one of us faces war in a truly unique way as well as that whatever you faced could be worse than me, I do not believe that war is as horrifying as you perceive it. Wars are necessary for the maintenance of the state, it is the blood of the patriots which oils the machine of the nation- and if machine is left without maintenance for a long time it tends to break down. All in all I can safely say that you are a sovereign deserving of your subjects. About your initiative with skulls... I might copy this, but with femurs. Femurs broken and healed several times...
