"So, President Freidrich of Ravenia. Let's see what we've got here... Awful childhood... Became a lawyer... Wife died, son died. Well, that's certainly an unpleasant life story. My condolences. Anyway, it seems that many of his policies are in direct response to his own experiences, which while not necessarily a bad thing, shouldn't be the primary focus of a political leader. You have to represent the interests of your people, not just your own experiences, even if they're issues that are worth dealing with. Still, all in all he seems decent enough, and I wish him well."

"Not many is known about him, but given his political stance, there is a chance, he might try to interfere with our expansion in Africa. Not that, he's gonna be a threat to our horde, but if it's possible for us to make him join us peacefully, or at least not try to halt our crusade for freedom, that's would be nice. I mean, we ain't exactly capitalist too, we are economically centrist... Oh, nevermind, this is still capitalist by his standards." -Shawn Bjornson

"Well Shawn ye have had yer say of me, but now it be my turn.

Well ya be an... okay chap in my book. Quite a bit of a interventionist are ya? Yer pretty spread out if I'm gonna be honest. A front in the America's while also maintaining a front in the Middle East? while also opening a front in Africa? yer logistics must look like crap and yer people should be bleeding money trying to get enough material everywhere it needs to go, I'm personally surprised that none of the big wigs in the America's or Europe haven't already stepped in, especially with that invasion of Mexico.

That wouldn't fly with all the people on the Cartels pay roll.

Now to be fair you've been pressing for rapid industrialization of conquered territories and that's good and all but those don't pay out quickly like it used to automation makes human work efforts mostly circumstantial instead of necessary. A few trade deals under the radar aren't nearly enough to fuel an economy that has to industrialize multiple nations of varying ability to do so, has multiple fronts open across the globe and so much more.

CFC could make it happen... but ye see Shawn... CFC be the devil. I'm more than happy to sell my soul cause it comes with really good pay and I don't really give a hoot about the world and all that, my purview is ta just enjoy all the shit the world has to offer while being paid to do what I love, but yer a leader of men and women that rely on ya to make shit get done. In today's world yer kind of self-righteous imperialism is not looked upon well, and I can't help but feel it's gonna bite ya in the ass.

Ye gonna need a lot of luck buddy."

"Hey Chief, as Tajique's noted, as excellent as you are in your trade, I can't really trust you. Anybody who doesn't 'give a hoot about the world' loses sublime qualities to appreciate certain aspects about life...even if enjoying what it has to offer feels great, liberating, I admit.

Actually...I'm kinda intimidated to lecture a...412 year-old granny...as I'm sure there isn't any life experience that can't surprise you and it would all backfire, so unless I can prove a higher power writes morality, I'm incapable of objectively opposing your profiteering, which is, in a sense, also legal. An idealist would muse that your CFC is a cautionary tale over what happens when there isn't a State monopoly on violence, but I'm sure that a lot of States employ you. So, crap. The least I can hope for is that we stay on our own lanes, professionally speaking. Moreover, his empire is one step short of making itself lasting and stable enough to place the whole planet under a single state, which would lead to nothing short of the ascension of his entire species into the spacefaring stage. I approve of both aspects, and I can believe he'll be able to hold it together long enough to see that happen. My opinion is positive, and my intentions cooperative."

He's a talented general but he's also very stubborn. He will go for any and all means to stop the threats to his empire. On the flipside, he could sometimes lack the mental fortitude to consider different options. But know this, he does not give up.

"His life is rather unimpressive as it's just another leader winning the game of life, and coming out as the victor. This isn't a bad thing it's just repetitive and boring in my honest truth. I like winning all the time with my foes being incinerated in the process as I see it would be an insult to taint any world with their existence, like the dogmatic Wabbits as a prime example. We need actual leaders and not fanatics that waste good men over silly ideologies rather than a proper purpose. Anyways, going back to him before I started ranting perhaps out of the genericness that we leaders have a tendency to have in common. The Phlegomy is an alright guy and I find it unlikely he'll become a problem to my goals in restoring my domain's rightful glory over the galaxy. "I must say that my first impressions of this Emperor are... less than positive. He strikes me to be a fascistic megalomaniac obsessed with Empire, as if we don't have enough of those here on Earth. The man is so full of himself that he's surrounded himself with biological mirrors, and his ego is bloated to the point where it could be considered a small moon. His obsession with the past is also rather unhealthy, and has endowed him with a reactionary ethos that drives his imperialist expansion. It should be no surprise that my opinion of Vanderbilt is rather negative. I'm not exactly predisposed to like someone who lists imperialism and 'civilised races' in their 'for' category."

"Now, here we have Chancellor Holten of Novostia, before his demise. Given the manner of his death, this should certainly be an interesting read. He's a 'conservative-progressive' apparently, but from the from the look of it I'd call him a right-wing populist with some social-democratic views. There's a reason they called them social-fascists back in the day, you know. Former soldier, fought against a socialist uprising. A regular running dog of reaction and capital, it seems. Not someone I'm a big fan of."

"While I commend the zeal of this man, I am presented the impression that he has chosen to define himself by his struggle against what he sees as 'oppressors'. There is a danger to this, as quite often little thought is given to what might transpire once this struggle is finalized, one way or the other. What will he do with himself once he emerges victorious? Is there another fight that shall take place after? Will there be another battle after that? An endgame must be planned for just as much, if not more than the planning for the endeavor itself. What information I have gleaned from the few reports I have available suggests no such endgame plan exists. I am certain Vermuth has a story about people who fail to plan for victory. I do believe all of his stories end in death... often in large amounts." - Cala Granses Wavecrasher

OOC: This better?

"Overall the Calas as a group are known for their efficiency in work and the fact they are locked into their position till death do them part.

Cala Windham Hawkeye is known for his competitive style which come from his work in the Caleshan. He represents many others in their competitive agreements in order to emphasise production and productiveness. He is fast, efficient, rarely spending time to enjoy the finer things in life which people in a more leisurely state will take for granted. He loves progressive attitudes as well as competitive spirit and both serve his day to day life as a Cala.

Cala Granses Wavecrasher is a diplomacy nut. He takes the phrase 'The Pen is Mightier than the Sword' and runs a mile. He responds quite well to the maintaining of dignity, however he can become somewhat irritable and annoyed. I like how he is able to hide and disguise it pretty well. Sadly, his wife died at childbirth leaving him to take care of his two children. He does so in his stride, even going as far as to teach them martial arts, numerous languages and much more.

Cala Victus Starwalker, evident by name, he adores and admires space exploration. He is autistic, although mildly, due to issues with drug abuse when he was in the womb. Some may argue that this allowed him to see the world in a different view, hell, be more efficient even. I'd have to say I agree.

Overall, they seem like notable characters, however there are many to choose from. I wish them luck in their duties and hope they are well." - Kesley Taylor.

Cooking Nora, double ninja'd. Please wait for the addendum.

The camera focuses on The Holy Trinity out on the track, cooking sausages on the engine of a Vauxhall VXR8 under a roof with a telly behind them

Jeremy, flipping a sausage: "Okay mates, I suppose we all remember the mess that was trip to Patagonia"

Richard: "Quite hard to forget, your plate got us kicked out of Argentina"

Jeremy: "Well, apparently, in the time we've been gone, it's turned worse - take a look"

James: "How is it that almost every place we go, it devolves into civil war shortly after?"

They all focus on the telly, which is now displaying assorted images of Patagonia in all of its glory, much to Richard and James' confusion

James: "... All of that happened after we left?"

Richard: "The war? The total anarchy?"

Jeremy: "Well, not really. That's actually an alternate universe where a man called Konrad Svhrhrnrhnm turned all of Patagonia upside down, and to an extension, the rest of South America as well"

James: "Good Lord. Why did he do it anyway?"

Jeremy: "Out of spite"

Richard: "Really? All of that, out of spite?"

Jeremy: "Yes, you see, he had a very difficult childhood and a very controversial ideology in his"

James: "And that suddenly justifies it, yeah right"

Jeremy: "And that's not all, he's apparently an artist"

Richard: "Great, let me guess. He did paintings with people guts or something like that"

Jeremy: "Not really, but he did make some theatre plays where the focus was to make the audience suffer"

Richard: "Yes... You've got a picture of him? I'm chucking him straight in the 'don't get' bin"

Jeremy: "Oh, and that's not the best part. He's the man keeping everything from spilling over to the rest of the world, and so - he's the best man to be sitting on that high chair"

James: "I think I'm going to get sick"

Richard: "I think my brain damage is surfacing again..."

Jeremy, to the camera: "Trying to make sense of Patagonia can hurt a man's mind"
