- In the underwater city, two roles have emerged from the City's ongoing civil war: the City Monitors who defend the peace and the Red Caps who fight against unjust systems. The city's infrastructure is crumbling under its own weight and kinship is snuffed by the paranoia of totalitarianism. Yet the people would be in for a surprise as their virtual overlord have died many years ago as the oppression continues under his name...

oh so few in number. She appears to have been born into vampirism, for instance. Her world treats it as a separate lifeform entirely, rather than the disease my... contemporaries oh so vehemently insist it is. Who is to say which appraisal bears more weight? And yet I stand somewhat apart from even that - for a covenant-blooded vampire is something of an oddity even among our kind. Regardless, on a surface level, broad similarities of race and provenance are about all we share. She is a pacifist, while I... am not. She hails for her people to be coddled by the institution she leads, while I consider such antics to weaken one's populace. Doctrinally, we couldn't be more apart. And yet... she and I are more alike than she might care to admit. For she too seeks power. Perhaps not to the same ends, and indeed she would no doubt detest the notion that what she is doing is in any way antithetical. But she is a manipulator. She may barter and bargain, but it all amounts to seizure of might. She strikes deals with her enemies to secure her position, and stands steadfast against that which she believes to jeopardize her goals. For that, at least, she has some measure of respect from me. This does not mean that I endorse her, by any stretch of the word. I am resolutely against practically all she has set out to achieve with her nation. But she is certainly no pushover, no matter what her critics may assume. To one with an eye for power, that much is obvious."

-Onvyr Tradan, Lord of the Isle

On the Queen:

"A show-woman. One who claims artificial poverty, resigns herself to the life of a pauper for the sake of sucking approval from the masses. Who whores herself out to self-proclaimed gods to claw some modicum of power for an agenda that is not her own. She too seeks power... but she is a leech. And this is coming from a vampire. I... somehow empathize with Ambrosia more than I do with this woman, despite our broad doctrinal similarities. She seeks rule not by strength or merit, but by some divine "right". She spins tall tales of her rise from the lowest strata of society, but all that gives such things credence is the peoples' wide-eyed belief in her godliness and grace. One must seize opportunity. Build upon it. She and I both know that. But her methods of attaining such are utterly revolting."

I have said this before, but I will remind of this again - it is unfortunate, that some fascists and dictators can even smoothtalk Valentiniars to "neutral", if they manage to keep all the trash talk for equally trash leaders. I know, that most of dictators or assholes are either deaf or uptight, and will throw any friendship down the hole, but still... Fash need to get bashed, not let around to run free.

She has more processor capacity than Clarissa, and is also a tank class, yet she is still like a little sister to Clarissa? I guess, that height isn't everything, and if one has a bulky build, they will bring a taller guy down.

Although she was made by a Polish company, her Polish is rather broken, if compared to English. Not that I would have much problems with it, though - as a speaker of only a single language, it even is easier for me, as otherwise I would need to deal with those thick accents... Overall, a solid neutral on her.
