The Dominion is a country, were territories can become sentient, and decide that they don't want to be a territory anymore.

AAN: Every conflict the Dominion has been part of, every minor battle, scuffle, and skirmish has all been a branch of a single military conflict, the only military conflict the Dominion even considers a war. It is a war on a scale of multiversal infinities where vast spaces incomprehensible to the human mind are split into pieces and physical laws are spilt like blood. It is a war which Dominion recruits hope never to see and through death, likely never will.

AN: In their universe the Antarctic began warming up in the early 1900s which led to an influx of colonizers from across the world.

arms and manufacturing is Synne's biggest export, and the average Synnian knows enough about engineering, that they can pawn off tanks and aircraft. Also weapons making is a common family business it seems Murazgora is located on the largest peninsula in the world, the Istaya Belt. Biogeographically, the country is split into three regions: warm, sparse steppes in the central region; forested mountain ranges ranging from the central to the northwest; and a subtropical rainforest in the north. Most of the population resides in the forested, hilly meadows.

AAN: Being a relatively large coastal country, Yuralria bears one of the longest coastlines in the world stretching over 10,000 kilometers in total length. This access to the ocean has propped up its fishing industry since the first years of its colonization and in no place is this more prevalent than the appropriately named Coastal Region which rests at the Southernmost "strip" of the nation's territory.

AN: They were birthed from the nation of Theramia following an armed secession effort which saw revolutionaries come on top against the U.S.-supported Theramian government.

Despite Synne referring to both the corporation and the country, the two are legally not the same. Indeed, both are separate but have a symbiotic relationship allowing for the state of Synne to have low taxes while, presumably, the corporation of Synne has a lot of freedom. Of course, both are under the (either De Jure or De Facto) autocratic rule of the CEO of Synne Industries, which acts as both Head of Corporation and Head of State. Also, there is a direct democratic system of government, though members of parliament have 5 votes while citizens only have one.

This is a rather bright view of a corporate pseudo-cyberpunk (before it was cool) nation. At least, until you dig too deep and find something you don't

So, to scrape off the basic facts that I have read in their overview factbook, Wexas' forefathers had settled over near the Brazoria river, and then, it had seen lots of booms during its lifetime...up until the 2060s, especially the 6th year of the 2060s, that's when everything started to go to shit, it was split up into Warlord states, who all fought for decades, decades, and mooorrrreee decades, up until 2152, but by that point? Everything and everyone that knew about pre-2066 Wexas was just dead, and the place had reverted back into Medieval-era styles.

AAN: The President of the United States is Laser Force General James Townes, who deposed his predecessor, President Buford, in a military coup d'etat in 2021. Buford was highly controversial, to say the least, owing to his policy of "American Singularism" which entailed extreme isolationism to the point where the American populace was taught that the USA was the only country to exist.

Drill sergeants are allowed to make use of corporal punishment in disciplining recruits, so long as they don't severely injure the recruit. Well, I guess it's even more like Russia than we thought, then; their military probably has just as much hazing going on.

Baizou: With only 7 prefectures, Baizou is relatively small where administrative divisions are concerned, especially for its size and population.

While they were nowhere as successful in it as they were in real life, their equivalent of the Soviet Union also made it to the Moon during the Space Race. Which is hilarious because like. The "landing on the moon" thing is just some useless, extra "step" the US took to pretend it hadn't lost the Space Race so badly.
