For those who follow Salsa music, today a local singer Raphy Leavitt left this world. Local radio has been playing one of the songs he sang which some people like to play at wakes. The song was written for an band member lost in a highway accident in the US. Accident happened in 1972. So today they were playing it for him. Chances are it will also play at his wake. Song is happy but sad , kind of sad.

This is Raphy Leavitt singing the song and at the start they tell the story of the song.

Waka Flacka, No Hands: It has been one of my favorite songs since it came out a couple years ago. It is pretty catchy in my opinion.

Jon Lajoie - Very Super Famous

*More people know me than there are people on the Earth
In all the thousands of countries people are singin' my words
Even in the countries where people die 'cause they're so poor
They save up to buy my album instead of going to the grocery store*

*'Cause I'm more famous than food--that's right, you heard me
More people know me than there are people who know how to eat
I'm more famous than mountains, I'm more famous than watches
And if you wanna hang with me, make sure your panties are crotchless*
