Depends, since it has now just come to be asociated with militarism as whole likely nothing. If joined with homophobia or racism it would be punished with several eyebrow raises.

Not a crime, as there exists no legislation pertaining to dog breeding.

Falsely accusing someone of murder, wherein the accused has already been executed or—for jurisdictions without capital punishment—has served the maximum sentence.

They'd be forced to pay a hefty indemnity to survivors of the person accused. If it happens in a state that doesn't enact capital punishment the aforementioned will receive the indemnity and be released from custody as well. There might be a stint in an penitentiary for the accuser as well, again depending on the state this happens to and how much the judge decides he hates them.

I mean, taxing the poor would be a horrible idea, I mean, they have no money, and are sad, and have to plant stuff, and addition to that, we could probably give them good clothes, a house and money I guess.

RIG sends an infantry robot to confiscate your supplies, and then reprimands you for both providing food that isn't on the strict Comintern dietary program, and engaging in capitalist(ic?) activity. You then lose a small amount of Performance Credits.

Salted caramel doesn't exist in Val'Grazia, so if it was to appear, it would be regarded as a strange curiosity and be studied by mages.
