Ministry - Cannibal Song

Fourth song of the 1989 album The Mind Is A Terrible Thing To Taste.

VIP - Messiah J and the Expert.
Album: Now This I Have To Hear (2006).
Genre: Irish hip-hop.

*He starts to visualize his own time:
Seventy-eight eventful years crammed into a page-and-a-half with a nice border...*

"Does anybody out there even care?"

*And then his eyes go blurry and out the curtain he stares,
And wonders how the death page became his current affairs.
He tries to block emotions, says, "It's all a waste of breath.*

I'm one drop in the ocean on this old conveyor belt."

*He thinks about significance, starts philosophizing -
Another day, another death, another cross, surmising.*

*Our old friend starts to cry, but wears a smile through his tears.
All the good times, the weekends, came flooding back in mirrors,
The happy memories to drown all the facts and figures.*

Every name to a face, every tombstone a heart;

He saw the gatherings, loves, pastimes, passions, and art -

"Although I am a number, I'm a very special digit!"

He took a last gasp in the house he'd always lived in,

And jumped into those pages,

Another VIP for someone in tomorrow's papers.

Such a haunting song about dementia and the end, which leads me to ask why this duo fell off the face of the Earth and why they didn't garner more popularity. A damn crying shame.

This. For a modern "Christian" rapper, this is a more than decent track.

Yeah, it's a great song.

I thought that whole album (Anomaly) was somewhat solid actually...aside from the awful CCM-influenced production in the second half.
