Actually, little is done. Our monarchy is already diminishing from true power, while only a small portion of people strongly support and/or worship (I guess) the royal family. Obviously there's limits to how invasive or threatening you can be, as is with all citizens, but you wouldn't expect more public outrage than having your actions accused by some extreme radio talk host.

How does your nation react to loitering around government buildings?

Death penalty. All true Sepulcrist have been thoroughly taught to throw rubbish in their respectful places in the designated rubbish bins. Those who do not comply are either foreign spies, defectors, illegal immigrants.

I'll go with those three alternatives: being a foreign spy - death by hanging, defecting to a foreign power - death by hanging, illegal immigration - deportation.

How about election fraud?

There are two parties, and both engage in copious amounts of electoral fraud. Nominally, infringement of the democratic system is a 500,000 FM fine and two year imprisonment, but in practice it is legal.

Anybody caught stealing must repay the person they stole from and pay a fine. Larger theft, such as stealing a vehicle, will normally get you imprisoned.

Dependent on where. If it's during peace times or a lull in conflict it's usually just a court marshal and a dishonorable discharge. But if it's during the heat of combat or in a heavily active war zone most officers would just shoot you.
