The Ghesik warriors regard knives as status symbols, despite preferring longer-range weapons or long-armed weapons. They use knives to flense and flay, fight, and a number of other things. Despite this, they rarely make their own metal knives or daggers, generally only using them in combat as a last resort if their mount is killed.

The Seraph's wet-ΔV is 1723.55 km/s. Given how its statistics are largely similar to a ship I tried to do the math for in a hard-sci-fi sort of setting, and that ship ended up with more ΔV despite having arguably poorer performance in terms of thrust and fuel-efficiency, I think I miight have fudged the envelope a little bit.

Oof.

Also, pretty much all of their worldbuilding is diamond-hard in terms of realism.

Their population is split into several subpopulations known as Clades, some of which possess impressive post-human setups including sentient nanoswarms, sentient ecosystems, and even semi-organic predators... something for all tastes, I guess.

Above ninja: shiiiiiiit... I've already looked over that several dozen times... gimme a bit.

Ah, got one!

Their religion was known as 'Sky Worship', but the user thinks that's a bad name. I suggest 'Winds of Change', due to their varied forms and meaning.

The FT Caleshans serve as bodyguards (I doubt he needs the, tho) and enforcers for the (mostly) benevolent God of Time, Sojun. In return for their loyal service, they have been granted the power to mix with the fabric of time, rendering most "conventional" weapons ineffective.

So far, so fascinating. Apparently, they're some sort of hivemind which has destroyed the top power of the area, forced a machine empire to ally with some sort of concept (honestly kinda hope they win) and, best of all, they use endnotes! Just personally, I really like that kinda stuff, makes it feel more real I think.

The executive branch of the government is a dual monarchy with 33-year terms in which a boy and a girl are chosen by sortition from the priestly families. They are raised by regents until they are ready to rule by themselves. The previous monarchs are judged and either forced to live in Iltu's palace for the rest of their lives (good) or executed by drying (bad).

The capital of Hatsunia, Miraito (which rather un-subtly means Future Metropolis in Hatsunese) is nicknamed the "Silicon Metropolis" for its highly developed information technology industry, a culture of venture capitalism, strong university-industry connections, and high investment in scientific research. The city is home to a number of renowned Hatsunian companies, including their version of Amazon, Microsoft, and Twitter.

There's a bit of a gap in our boi Yaniv's history where he meets up with everyone's favorite stoner and runs around telling people to get out of his swamp. During this period, though, it can be inferred that Yaniv a) acted as Wuchu's sugar daddy, arming them with Katastrophestaat weaponry, and b) got really really high in the woods.

It's also possible that Kotera's real name is David Sokol, though I doubt it, as I think I remember someone else in the Swamp Gang having that name.

Unfortunately, it appears that in 2174 Wuchu finally bought it. Probably because EU III decided they'd had enough and finally got rid of 'em. That or Kotera finally died.

Yaniv then proceeded to pull an Atilla and re-made Wuchu except with added deserter-murdering. Atilla isn't a role-model, Yaniv. You should've learned that when he blew a poor Central dude's leg apart.

Actually I get an incredibly uncanny feeling from the Desertists. They... I don't know, the whole "we're your new family, if you leave your new family we put a bullet through your head" kind of feels... eerie.
