"Feodora is a breath of fresh air compared to her husband. I have to praise her self-control and strength, because Kazamirochka scares me to death and she's married to him! Enough of that, though. It's easy to see that Feodora is an extremely intelligent woman. She uses her head a lot more than most people do - that is not to say I particularly like her, but she is more tolerable than most. I could happily say we can 'agree to disagree' on some issues and leave it at that."

"What can I say about Little Charlie that I haven't already? While the dossier has expanded a bit, it still reflects on such a tiny, tiny man. He's done a lot, working himself smaller with every sweat, some good, but so spineless and weak, deluded by the sickness that is compassion and empathy. Oh, and his hat is fucking stupid. It looks like a fabric square tried to mate with his skull. It's really embarrassing. And those shoulder pads are stupid too. Did the outfit get caught in a motor? It looks like it's damn well falling apart! And all of that surrounding his stupid, ugly face. He instated that stupid idiot democracy, leaving the government open to a popularity contest by a bunch of drooling invalids, I hope he realizes he better be happy he's monarch because that ugly mug would never be voted into office."

"And here you finally show your true colors. Hope your people enjoy the recording I made of that.

Oh, you have 'limits' because you have an 'reputation to uphold? Boo fucking hoo. You had to deal with stupid people? There's an easy answer to that, and you know it to be true, deep down. But you're such a 'big woman' with your 'limits'. Limits are for wimps.

Wow, you're missing the point of it all. Where did you learn to read? Because I have every mind to have whoever taught you to read used to test our new weapons, because they clearly didn't do a good enough job. I never forced anyone to worship me as a god. I find the idea of anyone believing in a god to be a disgusting display of pure idiocy. In fact, that was just one more thing I hated about those fucking primitives. How am I above such people? Simple. I'm a genius with two doctorate degrees from an advanced, spacefaring civilization. These idiots didn't have electricity or even know what a periodic table was, and they thought that lightning 'came from the heavens'. They were completely scientifically illiterate and wasted all their fucking time praying instead of expanding the boundaries of scientific understanding. I'm better than them because they're fucking morons. No, I didn't like them looking up to me as divine, it was condescending and naive. They thought my technology was some kind of magic, how fucking stupid is that?

More like by the time I left the planet, the civilization I once served had ceased to exist, and I didn't have anything better to do. Conquest is a respectable enough challenge for my genius military mind, and once I had left that fucking irrelevant pissant backwater planet I found myself the member of an endangered species. Would you care to have me replicate that for you, so you can experience it first hand? All it will take is 90% of your species to die, whatever worthless, pointless species it is. It would be really easy for me. Oh, and I don't treat everyone like shit because they didn't help me. I treat everyone like shit because everyone is shit. You want to call me an idiot? Tell me, how many doctorates do you have again? You're just a mere child!"

OOC: Opinions are being given without knowledge of "the truth."

IC:

"This is—really not a good timeline, to be honest. A world dominated by military buildup and torn almost too neatly in half by a global war... Not that that's the Chairwoman's fault, I suppose; it's just the hand she's been dealt. Still, I suppose I should be grateful to see someone like her in command of the alliance, one who is interested in liberating the oppressed and advancing societal justice... though—and I'm surprised I of all people am saying this—she comes across as strangely abrasive. Normally, I'm all for the adage that 'well-behaved women rarely make history.' But Chairwoman Yamami-Romanova manages to take it too—well, perhaps it is best left as my confidence that honey attracts flies better than vinegar."

—Premier Fukushima Sonoko

"A militarized Japan leading a Pacific alliance with a 'war hero' at the helm? It is as if we learned nothing from the Pacific War and the so-called 'Prosperity Sphere.' No slight to the Japanese people of this timeline, mind you. I wouldn't be surprised to find out that state suppression had deadened their attempts at dissent, just as it had under the last militarist regime in Japan. Some might think I am tilting at windmills, but I hope I am credible speaking as both as one who is by citizenship Baizoan and by ethnicity Baizoan-Japanese. I see my people's role in the Pacific War as well—our role as accomplices—and I feel my responsibility to stand against military buildup and the justification of mass violence. The Chariwoman's liberation ideology rhetoric is pleasant enough, and her overtures of negotiation sound nice, but her persisted complicity with and support for this militarized hegemonic global oligarchy suggests that she is not applying her rhetoric where it matters most. Perhaps she simply does not really understand what she has been saying and just thinks it will win her votes. A leftwing populist, if you will: someone with a great voice and an admittedly very cute face who can curry favor and use favor as power despite not entirely understanding it."

"Fukushima Sonoko. Someone who, to my understanding, has her priorities utterly wrong. She has inherited a tangled web of a government so complicated it takes legal scholars to unravel the most basic decision, and yet her main priority is on trying to afford her people more freedom. Look, I hate that at the best of times. But in her situation? She is working within a self-sabotaging system and doing nothing to resolve it! I understand that she's trapped against competing with people who'll annihilate law enforcement or gut the military or impose religious law upon the country, but even so, I'm disappointed in her inability to solve her country's greatest problem. Until she realises that the only way to make her nation's government effective is to destroy the needless regulations that inhibit her power and give herself more ability to do something...oh, what am I saying, she's not going to do anything good with that power anyway. Fighting poverty is one thing, giving theocratic institutions more power is another. Fukushima fights for the freedoms that destroy countries. And let's be honest. Someone who was put into power on the basis of indecision is not going to be a good leader."

Valentine Z as a country tends to produce people who are rather excitable, so I'm not surprised her and Valentijn get along as well as they do. There are more terrifying people from that country, but I still wouldn't be eager to take Clarissa on a fight. She reminds me of Gikochinai. Always so happy and upbeat. Very different from how I usually feel. I will say though- having most of my mind outside of myself? That seems like an existential problem waiting to happen. Maybe it's different for digital information, but there's no way in any reality I'm putting any part of my brain outside of my skull. Anyway, I have nothing in particular against Clarissa. Because we won't collapse anytime soon, no matter how many times she says, that I am "bad leader" or "too soft" or that our ideology destroys our country. What she doesn't seem to realize, according to her speech about Fukushima Sonoko, is that giving all power to one single person is dangerous. If the unquestioned leader with ultimate authority suddenly becomes sick or dies, country will lose that one thing holding it together. And then, it's either a free-for-all civil war among factions for control, or a slow and painful collapse, where new authority will prefer lining their pockets and provinces will secede."-Overboss Shawn Bjomson Miroslavsky is certainly a very impressive man. Holding together a revolution of such a diverse range of ideologies is never an easy feat. Neither is holding together an independent nation that, at the time, had yet to decide its true nature. Political purges to ensure loyalty can sometimes end up in quite a mess, it's good for him that his purges did not.

I don't see his war crimes as being particularly relevant; in the long run, committing war crimes is less damaging to the economy than a protracted war is.

I wish Miroslavsky the best of luck in dealing with the Kozavian Empire. It seems like the rebellion of Basdon might be a sign of further actions to be taken by the Kozavians.

RESPONSE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE FEDERAL REMNANTS
HAIL WASHINGTON || NEW REMNANTS

"Sickening, another alien abomination that, this time, doesn't even know the meaning of the symbols... it bears. The Fasces are the symbol of Aryan might and power, a signal and channeling of the divine Hyperborean ancestry within all pure Aryans. Here I am, looking at a mongrel warmonger, waging war in the name of furthering their xeno degeneracy, that is unworthy to bear the symbols that it carries and uses. Don't even get me started on their perversion for even thinking to deviate from heterosexuality... I've said enough."

If you are going to even think about hurting her, just know that I am going to make it uneasy for you. Sure, I am not the one to threaten to kill or hurt a person, but psychological warfare worked for Vlad the Impaler, I am gonna do the same to you too! I have nothing good to say to you, so let's end it here, and never look at me again. Or to Amaki.

"Such threats are obviously part of a cunning trick to relieve the international community into further believing you to be some... some... some pacifist! Well- I will not be so easily tricked! I have long been aware of your vile ways, which quite clearly go beyond 'psychological warfare', and if you think I shall give up on My continued efforts at notifying those around Me of your awful character, you are sorely mistaken! I will not be silenced, and I shall not allow such direct bullying of such a fine, personable, and overall decent leader be so sorely unanswered! Petitions! Letters! And other such dastardly items of notary shall arrive daily at your residence, all denouncing you, and you shall have a very rough time establishing time to fully check your mail!"

like extremely good parents, just like papa wolf and mama bear. They are extremely caring and wholesome, but should someone threaten them or someone they care for... then it's too late for him to pray. Despite being peaceful, kind and all, Valentijn, using only psychological warfare, can make our major raids look like a small, peaceful gathering. I am just glad, we are on his good side!" -Shawn Bjomson

"Meremaid wannabe goddess with megalomany gonna threaten my friend with spam. And I just found a nice spot to dispose some harmless, yet rather annoying garbage, which will take some time to remove it. This'll be a symmetric action in response to her actions should she proceed with her plan. Cause spamming my pals, is not a road to my heart. Either way, it makes me a little bit harder to like her. But I don't hate her right now either." -Shawn Bjomson

Sky Reavers are retconned Skyhooked. A bunch of crazy, wild everpartying anarchists, who are resistant to cold, heat and diseases, can process booze like hell. MT/PMT tech. Wanna know more or have a request? It's here: <https://forum.nationstates.net/viewtopic.php?f=23&t=505973>

Bjomson's abilities seem to consist of getting drunk and getting in fights. Needless to say, I am not impressed. His conquests for the purpose of liberating people are almost a mirror image of Caesar's conquests with the purpose of enslaving people. Why? Because there's so little thought put into logistics, administration, or infrastructure, just destruction, destabilization, looting and shooting. It's to the point where the only reason I can see for their ongoing success is divine intervention. The Sky Reavers have very little chance at a stable or prosperous future.

It's very beneficial to New Vegas that this is the case, as otherwise they might have become one of its competitors!

"Mr. House...what a pleasant surprise! Truly a man of academic distinction, and a formidable inspiration of industry for us all. I've always held strategy and ambitious sensibilities such as Mr. House's in very high regard, not only because they represent strength of will and character, but also because, evidently, it is precisely these sensibilities that have propelled both Mr. House, as well as his entity, New Vegas, to the high watermarks of efficiency and power that they are today. I think that it's also of particular importance to note Mr. House's political doctrine as the capable and mild, yet equally badass 'tough but fair' philosophy that it is. It's always a delicate balance required between daunting rigidity and patient forbearance to truly be an effective leader under such conditions, and House achieves this balance beautifully. All things considered, Mr. House is simply a very cool, impressive man, and I wish him continued success."

"Convallaria: A sprawling sun-soaked dreamscape silhouetted far beyond the ethereal horizons of austere morality and petty mediocrity. But behind the sterile flights of state-sanctioned-fancy lies a paradise lost...a land of milk, honey and sex turned rancid in the sun, as the harshly held colonial disciplines of a bygone era yield to the temptations of society's nighttime fragrances..."

"A dapper fellow, this one. It's actually kinda haunting in a way, how he so closely seems to mirror my own positions, right down to our nations' history of standing against two warring powers to either side. I wonder if this fellow knows how to play Go? I'd like very much to converse with him over a friendly game." -Kal'Shazzar
