depending on frequency and severity it can vary from no punishment to a talking to from the police to a few days at a military camp.

There are no punishments in public urination, but it is heavily frowned and discouraged. All Palladionians have access to bathrooms(especially public ones), so no one is peeing outside ☐ .

Depending on the building, you'll be imprisoned for a length of time and forced to pay for the repairs. Also, if it is a public or government building, you'll have to repaint it.

Insulting a Royal Guard (if YN maintains one) or alternatively throwing a rock through someone's window?

We don't have a royal guard, so that's not possible to do. So, let me say that if you were to toss a rock at someone's window to break it, you will be expected to pay for the damages done.

There is no army in Equai, and even if there is it wouldn't been a punishable offense, it wouldn't even been considered an offense just common sense.

Citizens are constitutionally protected from this sort of discrimination, so up to $50,000 in fines (as well as whatever the courts decide as compensation), up to 5 months in prison, up to 2 months in rehabilitation classes, and in particularly extreme cases a deprival of their right to practice that business (the store would be closed down, for example).

Assuming you mean a "hit and run", you're fined for the damage and if you do it twice in a year, your license is revoked until you re-take an extensive online test.

If you meant running up to someone and hitting them, that's considered public assault, which results in therapy, as well as paying the victim for any damages sustained.

Unless you are in a area near commercial and government areas, there is no punishment for this crime. If your backyard is near these areas, you will be fined 1,000 notes and shall repeat, 5,000 notes, then 25,000 notes.
