Depends on the circumstances, I suppose.

If it was during the middle of a normal day, probably a sternly-worded letter, a fine, or a few days of police custody, nothing terribly major. If it was in the middle of the night, or Lenin forbid, during an actual natural disaster, you best believe man is gonna get arrested for □□□□ (picking fights and causing trouble, also known as disorderly conduct), of which the punishment can be upwards of five years in prison.

Poisoning the water supply, burning crops, and/or delivering a plague unto houses?

Death by suffocation with blankets.

Burning your partner's clothes on the front lawn. (In the Citadel, you're required to replace their entire wardrobe at your own expense.)

That would be destruction of property, so depending on how large their wardrobe is, 5, 10, or 15 years in prison, with 3, 6, or 9 years of community service (respectively)

Throwing spikes into roadways?

Corporal punishment by being made to walk through hot coals. If you're a fire monk, then you're made to walk on dry ice.

Pranking YL by sneaking up behind them during a public speech (assuming you snuck past security), pointing finger guns at them and shouting "Bang, bang!"

(BTW, yes, the IC year is 2022.)

Again, it depends.

If the pillow was explicitly sold as a "cotton candy product," making sure to explicitly inform the consumer of the cotton candy contents and that the product is not intended to be used as an actual pillow, and that the product has undergone the proper inspections in relation to food products according to law, should be no big. Probably not a crime.

Violation of any of these is a crime under commercial law and will result in revocation of business license, temporary suspension from business-related activities for up to 10 years, and a confiscation of all profits made through illegal commercial activities.

Impersonate a public official, specifically a military officer, to steal money from the government? Dude, that's going to get you a good few years in jail! If it was exactly like the crazy German guy there who still ended up unjustly arresting other people as part of his scam? Life in prison for sure, buddy.

Attempting to illegally enter a prison and help rescue inmates will land you a sentence of 10 years minimum to 20 years. Depends on the size of the hole and what inmates the prison contains.

Again, it depends.

All littering is a violation of environmental protection law.

Individuals found littering will be subject to a fine of at least 3000 nguyen and at least 24 hours of community service for the second offense or greater.

Corporations found to be littering (pollution - can be charged by dumping waste in unsanctioned areas or going over pollution quotas) are not only in violation of environmental protection law but also commercial law, subject to either expropriation of assets or suspension of commercial activities for at least 5 years.

As per the rules of The Onigiri Enclave constitution's "Do-Over Exemption," for the first offense, all that would happen is just a warning telling you not to do it again. However, do it again, and you are nailed to the wall, and slowly your body parts are auctioned off live to anyone walking by in a live instant auction (which is also livestreamed across the nation), and as your parts are sold, you are slowly and methodically shaved & sliced apart live in fine detail, until every bit of you is sold to the highest bidder... and you must also pay a T738,000 fine and do 280 hours of community service.
