Unless Matt Bellamy seriously changed his voice to sound like the Radiohead singer, despite the title, that sounds just like Thom Yorke. I'm inclined to agree with the commentators that say it's Radiohead, because it sounds pretty Radiohead.

Now I kinda feel like listening to Radiohead, though.

we, unlike the bourgeoisie, have nothing to lose and therefore our expression will be the only honest one, our words will be the only challenging ones and our art will be the one revolutionary expression. We need new noise and new voices and new canvases to become something more than the last poets of a useless generation.

Man, memories from like 4 years ago are coming to me. These guys were once one of my favorite bands, and I listened to them all the time. Then I discovered a ton of new great bands and albums this last year and they were kinda bumped down.

Any album that changes a bands style slightly (or a fair amount) is controversial, because people can't respect a band, you know, evolving. I saw a lot of people complaining about This Will Destroy You getting out of their peaceful, pretty post-rock stuff and going more into dark drone music. And everyone's like "They should go back to their old stuff". No, they should do whatever the F they want.

Caspian-Quovis

Need to start getting into these guys, too.

Actually, that's not why the album was so controversial (they didn't really change their sound that much until The Game, and that was a huge success on their part). Basically it was the the single Fat Bottomed Girls/Bicycle Race off of the album along with Queen staging a nude, female bicycle race for the fun of it (and the hype I suppose) and putting a picture from this race on one of the covers of all non-American copies of the album. Oh Freddie you.
