"The Twins story is...perplexing. Their story is a mess, there isn't a consistent build up to justify disregarding the Old Guard outside from their incompetence in military warfare. That allowed the Russians to regroup and launch a major offensive into the heart of Germany. Before the Fatherland was somehow saved from the brink of certain defeat by the Twins now leaders of it. I do hope and insist the writer makes their story more coherent to analyze and comprehend more easily."

RESPONSE FROM THE INSTITUTE

"Pff another so-called god, another pretentious creature who thinks himself superior to men. One who tortures his creations by condemning to an universe of darkness and death, one whose misguided concept of love is to torture and oppress, is never worthy of my respect. After all, he is just another tyrant, not an higher being. He and his cronies in the Imperial Pantheon are mere manipulators who enjoy manipulating and toying with the lives of people for the sake of it, despite any ill-conceived justifications they make up for it. Brapture is a tyrant, as are all gods. And, as all gods he will one day fall, and the people of the Alkdorverse will be freed from his asphyxiating grip."

"Raleigh O'Connor is a competent, mostly benevolent but also highly questionable person. He seems like he wants the best for his people but some of the measures he has taken can be described as authoritarian, Orwellian or plain out eldritch. The begining of the document stated that he has no morals and well.. I can now see why. Starting from banning religious symbolism in public, to experimenting on one of their cities, killing political descendants, putting himself through questionable body-altering procedures to the point that he is immortal. He is rather complicated, but I don't think he is the worst man in the world, Res Publica is still a utopia compared to their despotic neighbors, I kind of sympathize with him as his world seems much worse then the world I came from, even Sherechia's totalitarian northern neighbour looks civilized compared to the nations in his world."

took a small bit of a wrong turn to this dimension and world. Oh well, that is not a big deal! What matters is that I am here, and I should try to enjoy it. Well, try to. I know you are trying your best to run a reasonable and not so explosive world here, Miss Yunru, but Fate has not been too kind to you and your world, and I really do apologise for that. Hmm, anyway, what else is there? Oh yes, quite a lot! You have a vast array of knowledge on yourself and your world, that is fascinating! I am sure a few of the Valentians, including myself, can appreciate the archive prowess, because you know what they say - better preserve it for eternities! I quite find it adorable in a slightly morbid way that you did not know how to use the MCV at first; no judgment here, even I would be stumped when the world has presented me with something as random as that, and that thing being the only thing forward. You are quite a little bit like me, having survived quite a handful of wars, though the deviation comes when I did not bother or want to build an army of my own. Am I being the most powerful being? Well, not really. I don't like to think that way; I just think that having an army this vast would not be that nice. Then again, I can say this comfortably from the vantage point of the 78th spatial dimension, looking down. I wish you all the best! Oh and err... if you did not manage to translate half of what I am saying, please do let me know, I can say it again slower to a translator.

I mean, who does not want to try to be anthromorphic dog sometimes? I know a few people who can relate to Spike from Tom & Jerry. That was pretty unusual, but again, who am I to judge? I have seen countless number of worlds! In another, you wanted to be a teeny tiny rabbit. Not even anthromorphic; just a rabbit. Anyway, looking at your dossier, hmm, the usual. Suffice to say, you kind of remind me of a couple hundred of others that I have seen and heard of. Equality for all, public safety, progressiveness, scientific advancement, all that good stuff. I mean look, these are obviously good things, I am not saying they aren't. But part of me wonders if I have branched 7e+30 universes that shared the same politics. It's just a food for thought for me.

Now, who do we have here? Chief Aviator Gwen something something very long name Allison. I've heard that the reason you all have long names is because your leader went a little crazy. Kinda makes me wonder if the radiation from the nuclear bomb did something with their brain, but lets talk about you, because I'm reading your character file. You're an interdimensional traveler who tried to stop a nuclear bomb from going off in in the universe you're currently residing in, but you failed and worse, you got stuck in there. You decided to live with the Valentinians until you participated in a space mission and got sucked into a black hole. Now I've studied astronomy, and all I have to ask is: How did you get close enough to a black hole to get sucked in without noticing it? Did you want to see a black hole up close to research it? Because the chance of stumbling upon is pretty low because of the vastness of space. Anyway, you fell into a black hole and traveled to a mental asylum, and then in an alternate Yangon. One where no nukes fell. Sounds nicer than my universe where the nukes fell in 1983, but let's proceed further with your story. You then teleported in a city on another planet that looked futuristic to you. Not to me, I literally see a city like that everytime I look out of my window. Then you traveled 27 years into the future to the same city, but this time, some crazy religious aliens are invading. These aliens kinda remind me of the Scalmar Followers, with their weird religion, their worship of ancient technology, and the look of their ships. Anyway, you then travelled to World War 2 era Earth and saved some people from Auschwitz, which I have to say, you're very heroic. You saved quite some people across the multiverse. So after WW2, you travelled to an underwater city called Rapture, which at the time you were there, was in a civil war. You then decide to leave the city because it was too crazy. But on the surface, you got struck by lightning and travelled to 500 MILLION WORLDS?! In all these millenia that you were there, did you ever try to fix your Dark Matter thingy again? Because it seems like enough time for you to fix your DMR. So anyway, lets proceed your story. You eventually ended up in a room of absolutely nothingness, and walked until you found some glyphs. That glyphs apparently turned you into an actual god. You then travelled around the ormniverse to have some fun until all universes ended. Then a bright flash of light happened and you woke up back in Valentine Z? Wait what? Was it all a dream? Because it all sounded like you dreamed. If all these things actually happened, then your backstory is even more crazy then mine. The interdimensional travel sound nice, because here in the Interstellar Federation, we are also working on our own interdimensional travel devices. Overall, you seem a nice person to hang out with, and maybe one time we can meet eachother in some other weird dimension.

“He is a shrewd and ruthless man who has lived a life of great adventure, drama, and intrigue. I see much of the wisdom of Axanatereneo within him, yet also some wicked deeds. Overall however he is a great man, a great warrior, and a great leader. I respect him for this. Surely he is blessed by his gods. Out of all the things I respect of him, though, it is his fierce stance against corruption that is most inspiring. There is no greater threat to order than the self-serving and it is refreshing to see he takes this threat seriously. While I still do not understand these strange systems where rulers are chosen by their own people I must say that as long as there are people like Anšar within them then they will be safeguarded from internal threats. There are many I respect, but few I respect as much as Anšar. As such I feel it necessary to offer him my finest blessings in spite of some of his more wicked deeds.

Huen Yene An-Lo Hane Buoran Xa-Ino Ronigan.*

While I can see into other realms I do not know if my power can affect them. Perhaps only Axanatereneo is capable of such things. Nevertheless, though it may mean and provide nothing to him, this is the highest form of respect I can give to a being of his caliber and that I do not dispense such a thing lightly. Only Axanatereneo Herself can earn higher praise. I hope at least that the gesture is appreciated.”

My personal thoughts regarding the Exuberant Superintendent

"I read that the Exuberant Superintendent is an 'android', basically an advanced thinking machine. I truly believe the field of robotics in that world will never fail to astonish me, much due to how it has advanced so much. But I digress, my focus today is on the Exuberant Superintendent: I am in agreement with the people of her time to be an exemplar of an android. Children want to be like her; the parents want her to be their daughter; the adults want to interact with her. In my opinion, the Exuberant Superintendent is doing something right: showing a loveable character. And yet... I notice the potential of her being a weapon and it hangs above her head like a target. Shameful of those powerful militaries in her world, who would want to turn her into their weapon, their own trump card. Though she is capable of becoming a powerful weapon, able to unleash considerable destruction upon her foes, the very last thing I'd want to do is to make her into one of the Empire's greatest weapons. She has been granted sentience, which is life still even for a machine, and she deserves to live her life free from the lecherous gazes of war hawks, even from the eyes of the higher echelons in the Greater General Staff."

"He's just as tall as me, and despite his meat-heavy diet, he makes ME look obese, I wonder what's his workout routine since he is a full 4Kg lighter than me? Anyway a conservative, traditional but egalitarian man that rules with common sense and decency, I may disagree with his opposition to homosexuality but at least he isn't actively hunting them down and he hates all variants of socialism and communism which as a socialist I can actually understand, I won't really complain on his economic views, he doesn't seem to be a laissez-faire let the market do everything kind of guy type of guy... well at least I think he is. Regarding his morals, he is your typical marriage is sacred kind of guy, nothing wrong with that though does he force it to the general population? I hope not. However this man is also rather interesting, during a hot summer, instead of complaining like any other royal would do, he made an airconditioner and he likes to buy books from bookstores all across his country, a fan of reading and at the same time I commend him for keeping touch with his people. So overall, great leader"

BN do any character except Inogo Estima.

Highly democratic and freedom-loving population, what if Mongolia and Japan had a child who also has an Indian driving instructor, increasing tensions between Market Socialists and Maoists, eats the aeugh fish, pets the aeugh fish, Aruday metro train doors have a tendency to amputate riders

General Tansagar is a man of great soul! We have surprisingly much in common with him - he is just like me religious, like I saluted my homeland and like me, to be honest, I like to have a glass of beer, hehe. It is also nice to see that he, like me, is confident in the possibility and necessity of using nuclear weapons, while at the same time sincerely wishing the best for his nation and people. All in all, he is the person who Comrade Estima can be proud off and put his trust on in the moments of hardship! I'd love to meet him and discuss the matters of nuclear weapons, beer and rifles ...
- Otto Von Ludendorff

BN, do Ludendorff.

1986, Yuri's Epsilon Army is close to taking over the world, and a paramilitary organization tries to hold what's still free from his control.

Now... who's next... Hey I know you. You're the person that called my backstory complete "bullshit". First off, I want to tell you that they all really happened, and that I have prove for them. But anyways, lets talk about your story. You are fighting a global army of brainwashed people led by a psychic Russian. You're originally from China, where apparantly the Chinese state decided what you studied instead of you. I don't really think that's a good idea, because you probably peform better when you study something that you like.

When the Epsilon Army attacked, you fled to Siberia, where you met some Russians ex-conscripts, and asked them if they could join your army. A lot of them also deserted, which probably means that either they're not fully committed, or you're a crappy leader. You then crossed the Bering strait and went into Alaska. There you set up camp, and made it your homebase for the war against Yuri's Epsilon Army. And you called my backstory unbelievable, not that I don't believe you, I just think that you have a very interesting story to tell. So where was I... oh yeah, Alaska. So you're fighting against an army of brainwashed, but I think the war may have some psychological effects on you, and no, I'm not talking about brainwashing. You seem to be very paranoid, always suspecting someone to be brainwashed. You even neglect your own health and hygiene, locking yourself in your room and staring at blueprints and making weird scribbles on it. How do I know what you're doing in isolation? Its in your character file, no idea who made it, but please don't kill that person. I assure you they're not brainwashed.

I've also read here that the power-structure of the Foehn Paramilitary regions is centered around you. In my opinion, this is pretty unsustainable. What happens if you are gone. Wouldn't the entire paramilitary regions collapse? I also read that you make a lot of strange decisions that would make only sense in your own mind. This kinda makes me wonder if your paranoia isn't just one of Yuri's mind tricks. Wait? Am I being paranoid about your paranoia. Oh no! Its spreading! I need to get out of here!
