At the end of the day my general stance is 'Yeah I'll poke fun at common clichés found throughout this website and its users, but unless you're blatantly breaking the rules/clearly trying to get around certain rules, then you can RP your nation however you want'.

On the topic of cliches, is it a cliché for people to have a "shoot first, ask questions later" type of attitude when it comes to situations like blockades?

for me there's seems to be a number of people who doesn't realise blockading someone is an outright act of war. <.<

-Huh. Coz I just saw a thing where someone tried to declare war over an embargo, going so far as to send a long-range bomber over in response.

Tbf I have this theory that younger characters are more relatable and are therefore more fun to write in a statistical generality.

AFRIKAN STAAT

It is an apocalyptic total war of survival. A crusade between two forces: that of the civilization of the White race against the Serpent. Only one side will win and inherit all of Africa, for the other will be utterly and completely annihilated.

Maybe if you're trying to run a proper democracy it's unrealistic. If you're running an authoritarian state it can be a little more realistic though, i.e. the previous authoritarian leader only trusts his child to take over for him like in Syria or North Korea. Even in democracies it's not exactly unheard of either for someone under the age of 40 to hold a high ranking position though.

I recently did a retcon on my nation's leadership for the leader to now be early 30s. I feel like there's storyline potential for young, inexperienced leader forced to take the reigns of a non-democratic state. Most people just do young leaders to have some mary sue child prodigy though.

WA "successor" attempts in II that becoming downfests of extremely self-destructive policies and tendencies.

Not that anything in II could even attempt to touch on everything else as a whole, much less influence it given that II is completely self-isolated from R&D and other gameplay, but it's funny to see people try anyways.

The only time I care about the NS stat users vs the NS stat non-users thing is when NS stat users (and it is always them) deliberately ignore someone's statement that they don't use NS stats and reply to them in an F7 thread using their stats as the basis for their reply.

To me, that's just being a bit of a dick, you know? Just coming in and deciding that you're going to ignore how someone else is playing their own nation.

I've noticed that a lot of politicians do tend to be tall and have really nice hair. In the US at least. It's more that they're old than that they're unattractive.

Worse still when it's talking about stuff not even remotely related to stats like "What's the SCARIEST thing about AN?" or "BN trains AN's troops, what's BN's opinion?"

Unless numbers are scary (oooooh, 1478! How horrifying!) there's no use in wanking numbers.

Honestly I can kind of get how someone could use NS stats in the 'scariest thing about AN thread if it's something like '92% of their people die by "disappearance" and the lifespan of their citizens is only 27' cause that can be scary because it implies that most people who live in that nation would end up being killed by the state before they even hit 30.

I do that too, shameless plug in my factbook. 😊

I normally would almost-always look at the factbooks, yup. ♥ But there were times (but not that many, thankfully) when you have to use the stats because you really can't find anything, and maybe they have like a single dispatch about their leader. And that was it.

Christian theocracies/holy empires. I've also seen a few Muslim ones, and possible one or two Jewish ones. I don't think I've seen any other real-world religions represented this way. Free idea for anyone who wants to take it: A Buddhist theocratic nation would be really interesting in RP.

I sort of have to wonder if they're even using that term correctly anymore. Correct me if I'm wrong but isn't that term supposed to be used for the dipshit children/teenagers trying to troll this site (and failing miserably) during summer break, hence, "summerposter?" People here overuse that term, tossing "summie" left and right, so bloody much that it may as well just have no meaning, or it means "somebody I don't like." I see more of those people using that term to death than I do noobs/actual summerposters.

I keep saying this exact thing.

Summerposter is the attempted trolls when schools are on summer break.

That's why they're called summerposters/summertime trolls and the whole period they're active is called NS summer.

It's not just a catch-all nickname for noobs.

Country Aesthetics

by Bistritza » Sun May 08, 2022 10:32 pm

This is a list of inspirations for a country which you can find in every thread! Listed from most to least common:

- Ukraine. We get it, now stop virtue signaling.
- We're communist so we use a lot of red and a star.
- Cryptic nazism ("fascism is allowed!!"). We know what the Odal symbol is and who it was used by. Think of something else.
- The above two cover the "EVIL DARK EMPIRE" inspiration.
- Anime. Anime flags with big cartoon milker babes. I have no complaints. Continue that.
- We're muslim so we use a lot of green and a sword/crescent.
