It was a British colony, but largely unprofitable until the World Wars, where it became a oil extraction zone. There were riots after WWII which were suppressed by the US (treating it as a communist revolution). After 2000, a revolt made it independent. It was ruled by a military dictatorship for 10 years, but then it transformed into a federal democratic constitutional monarchy.

Even though they reside on Mars, with no Earthborne assets, they still utilize the Terran calendar. I hope they at least use the Martian Sol timing.

Edited because I forgot what the timing convention for Mars was called.

It is essential that they have a foe to "rail" against.
It kind of reminds me of how the 3rd Reich's economy was really fragile outside of war. Not that Godular is anything like the 3rd Reich of course.

The Army of Arendelle has an active personnel of 90,000, as well as 20,000 cavalry and 10,000 cannons. Whether the cavalry is part of the active personnel or not is not specified. While it's been active since the 1400s, its earliest recorded engagement is during the Napoleonic Wars.

I used to speak about their nuclear weapons program before, but now some additional bits of info had emerged.
Back at the days of the Cold War, they had considered the possible threat of nuclear attack 'an evil spirit,' so they decided to construct their own nuke as a 'deterrent against evil spirits.' Such a questionable measure did cause the international uproar, but they had swiftly signed the Non-Proliferation Treaty and the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty, not to mention the ban of chemical and other non-conventional weapons.

In the "Council Socialism" of the Pan-Asiatic States, voters are first organized in sector-based units, called the Basic Economic Assembly, for example, the workers of a company or factory, or the soldiers of a barracks.

A pobair (baked roll) usually has meat filling (beef, mutton, chicken, etc.) inside a pastry shell. There can also be vegetables (even a fully vegetarian option), cheese, and/or spices.
