You Were But A Ghost In My Arms, Agalloch.

depressing stuff, man.

we, unlike the bourgeoisie, have nothing to lose and therefore our expression will be the only honest one, our words will be the only challenging ones and our art will be the one revolutionary expression. We need new noise and new voices and new canvases to become something more than the last poets of a useless generation.

"The Plagues" composed by Hans Zimmer, from the animated film "The Prince of Egypt".

One of the most frightening songs I've ever heard in an animated film.
I love it. ☐

"Discombobulate" is such a fun piece to watch. xD I especially enjoyed his compositions for "The Last Samurai". Emotional stuff right there.

"Set Fire to the Rain" by Adele. Her voice has a strange hypnotic quality to it, and I love her singing style. There's a strong sense of authenticity to it, which I feel many mainstream singers lack nowadays.

Some of my favorite Hans Zimmer stuff is the Black Hawke Down soundtrack, and I like his song on Crysis 2.

Also, Set Fire to the Rain is my favorite Adele song. Most of the stuff

I've heard from her I like okay.

Heard that song on the radio. It was one of those songs that took me a bit to truly like, but once I got to that point I really quite enjoyed it. My favorite song of theirs is Bronte. Sad song, sure, but I love it. My mom ran across that song of theirs at a good/bad time, like a few days after our dog died, who died 5 days after our first dog died. So the song just really hit us hard emotionally, but I loved it because of that.
