Metallica is too light to be considered metal for me. It's nowhere near the glory of death and doom.

You're right about them being light, but they are metal, or at least the old albums from Kill 'Em All to Metallica are. And yeah, death and doom is awesome.

Death/doom is even more awesome. The only thing better than either is merging them into one genre.

Igorrr-Tout Petit Moineau

Time to listen to the very strange avant-garde band that my dad showed me a few days ago. Like this song starts out all operatic or something, with a nice piano piece, then the singing changes drastically and the song turns all electronic....

Tsk tsk, you've been slacking off in this thread. I've been having to pick up the workload for you.

Rave time or metal time? *flips coin* Rave time it is.

Yeah. Haven't really felt like listening to music still. Or new music, anyway. Though really, I haven't listened to music that much at all. And then there's that video game I talked about, which I played for 6 hours yesterday. Will probably leave to it again soon.

Edit: I did post the entire games soundtrack on this thread the other day, though, which was a little insane to do with all the short songs.

I'd post more but when I really like a song like the last one I linked, I have a habit of repeating it endlessly.

Igorrr-Damaged Wig

Electronic, some classical piano, and glitchy metal?

Edit: Talking about the stuff avant-garde bands/artists combine is entertaining.
