The country maintains a socialist market economic model and implements some elements of citizen participation within the legislative process. Although it isn't clear whether the citizenry can submit petitions to the parliament to bring enact new laws, they can vote on whether or not a bill approved by the parliament is fully ratified or not. These votes take place every two months, with all pending legislation voted on. I'm interested in knowing whether or not this includes norms with force of law or all norms passed by parliament.

The Country has a very well established military and has a substantial military influence around the world, with an interesting levy and volunteer system that sounds solid and fair for the people of Eothasia. I would have liked to explore further the Tactical Encounter Airborne Regiment and the Navy Special Combat Assault Regiment though.

A thing of note is that their entire setting exists because Austria-Hungary was quickly beaten by the Italians in the first Great War, leading to a total collapse of the Dual Monarchy long before Somme or Verdun could make the first Great War an utter nightmare. The impossibility of this setting -that a) Italy even could beat A-H that quickly and that well and b) that the A-H's collapse would end the war three years earlier- it is pretty well thought out.

If I read this right, the Prime Minister is elected by the majority of ministers in the government. Amusingly, if the Prime Minister is up for reelection, they cannot vote.

They have a population of over 35B or as he say over 35,000M people. Their capital, the nexus, is also the largest city which is not very surprising.

According to Google Translate, their land's etymology is that it means gorilla in Portuguese, which refers to the animal, gorilla, which once existed in Goraria but now has been rendered extinct.

That reading (what I'm assuming to be some form of) English is actually fairly difficult, though I have to say that writing such a comprehensive factbook in it is very impressive! Definitely amongst the best I've seen.

Their nation has had four flags in modern history, ranging from their time as a Soviet SSR to their ICI year of 2029.

"No matter what, I won't forget those days we spent together."

"No matter what, I won't ever leave your side."

Time never stops flowing and seasons change, those innocent days of the past might never return.

AAN: So... in this world, in 1958, the United Nations member nations all got together after some American and Soviet troops tried to nuke to hell out of a UFO and accidentally subjected almost everyone in the squad to second degree death. So then, I guess, all the leaders of the UN member states got together and were like "cold war bad, shooty aliens good." So then they kind of just got left alone for a while until YEEHAW THE ALIENS ARE BACK and the boys (but mostly girls) got back in town. Speaking of girls, they have a bunch of Shipgirls, who are basically ships... but anime girls. I've think I've heard of this before, but I'm going to move on for a multitude of reasons, most of which that cannot be repeated in polite company.

As a side note, all of their Shipgirls are based on WWII battleships, and the organization itself is set in 1979. Unfortunately, this means the USS Ronald

That they're not really a nation, but rather a particularly well-written story/collection of stories about two sisters (I think)

They have something resembling the GuP Panzerfahren, with the notable difference that there's three gameplay methods rather than just "capture" the flag and annihilation. And it's named Panzer-KampfKunst instead of the already-named Panzerfahren.
