Not illegal if you don't break any other laws and if the bus is properly registered. Otherwise revocation of licensing to drive.

Not necessarily illegal, but if it's used to fuel any other illegal crime (like harassment and such) it adds 3 years to the sentence.

Burning religious symbols

Public burning of religious symbols would result in prosecution for hate speech, probably sedition and, if Islamic symbols, prosecution for blasphemy.

Overall probably 2-14 years in prison followed by exile.

Despite what you'd think, as long as the heresy involved isn't something like calling Muhammad (pbuh) a pedo or a serial killer or something, we don't really punish heresy. It's on a case by case basis, and we see promoting violent jihad against "non-believers" as more serious than simply saying things against Islam.

Very complicated case.

Under most circumstances you couldn't possibly prove there was rape if it was the spouse the one that is acused, however, if there was violence involved (hitting, choking, cuts, etc.) then you could make a better case for that, although conversely, the defendant could claim it was consensual (Like BDSM and that sort of things). The big issue with rape is that it can result in the
