Their president, Amanda Kathelyn Miller, is known as a proponent of the definite separation of the church and state. Though she is a female president, it's no big deal in NewSpiedska, as Inking females are physically more powerful than males.

They have a religion of their own called Naturolegism. It seems to be based around a set of laws that govern everything in the world, and has become quite popular with the people of Arcadia. It seems to have competed against Christianity at some point, with Christianity losing out when Christian priests started preaching against technological innovations like airplanes, metro rail, and vaccines.

There are several assimilation methods: the standard invasion, acting like gods, infiltrating governments with body doubles, hacking artificial processors, or diplomacy (in the case of other AI-based civilizations).

Apparently, it's stylish for people to dye their hair and/or wear wigs to resemble "anime-styled characters" as social strictness isn't high, but they don't go over-the-top and act like cartoons though.

AN: Arcadia's role in WW2 was mainly providing secure logistics for the Chinese in the East China Sea and eventually beating the Japanese at sea. Emperor Hirohito was more realistic, or more proactive, and opted for surrender in 1944.

They are a country on which spanish culture had a huge influence on it. They were at first populated by th nekos, and apparently, a lot of spanish people found them attractive or something, and now most of their people is a mix of races. Also, due to this influence, their main religion is Christianity, they mainly speak Spanish, and they even have a monarch and a parliament! Their nation is located half way to the USA from Spain.

Imperialism also helped them to get an economic growth, as they had also a good relationship with Madrid.

The military has physical punishment for soldiers, but they don't go overboard and torture or sexually abuse them. There used to be a hazing practice, which disappeared after the end of conscription in the Third Polish Republic.

Their space exploration technology (or attention to space travel) is great, having a rotating "hotel" in orbit and they sent a manned mission to Mars in 2016.

AN: They boast that "unlike primitive virtual reality systems", their VR is close to the real thing, which is good for simulations...but has the nasty side problem of causing confusion between reality and VR.

That's a little mistake, because hazing is still used. From the Polish PR military, there came "the wave" from.

Despite an annual trade convoy going to and fro the Isle and European Rome (via Cadiz and Gibraltar) for almost five centuries, a lot about the old Tohorinese Isle remained a mystery to Western historians and Classical naturalists as the island was protected by almost 2600 km of sea from prying European ambitions, the crossing was only barely beaten by the maritime cats in "Sampans" by piggybacking over the few Atlantic islands available. However in that pagan age, it was the first time that the people and rulers of the island would come to meet their neighbors through envoys. Turquoise, Lapizlazuli, Flower Poppy analgesic plants and the occasional concubine went to Europe; Classical science, olives, garum and wine went towards Tohorin. Though contact was almost always limited to a niche: the cities of Gades, Gibraltar and within embassies.

Their criminal court process relies on a sort of three-fold triumvirate of councils, one of which focuses on the law, the other focuses on the science/possible mitigating factors, and the third is focused on members of the community. Any two can override the decision of the third, so a guilty verdict need not be unanimous.
