NS stats are mostly accurate, but some of our policies shall be taken with a grain of salt.

1/10... Just doesn't look aggressive at all. Color scheme is quite benign and it's a tricolour, which tends to be used by more democratic states.

That's, uh... Roman, right? *checks up Wikipedia* Well, this is the history I can find on it at least.

Red is a generally more aggressive colour, but not really conclusive. Rome did some good things and some bad things, and that particular symbol is attached to Christianity, which was a largely force-for-good type thing back then. Not sure what to make of the stars; it reminds me of the EU but like with way more stars.

I can't really see anything to lean heavily one way or another. 5/10

That heart is either the most pacifist statement on the government, or is actually a cover because the nation is really evil.

0.5/10 OR 11/10 for subversion of expectation.
