Tbh it isn't very common amongst actually decent rp's. It's just that most OP's don't wanna deal with the fallout of their party blowing up on them, and guests/other ppl's characters dying on their watch I think.

Truth be told, I actually do agree with that. I would love an action-filled dinner party, but it didn't went that well the first time (I did two of them- the first one was... ohh boy), and I would really hate to see people dying in Val Z.

Plus it will ruin the carpets.

We did like one on the "shit will asplode" setting, but this was an almost closed rp and we were all pretty clear that shit will asplode from page 0. I'd like to think it went pretty well (not for the French embassy building tho <.>).

South Reinkalistan is a massive, ecologically-diverse nation notable for its roving student militias and widespread hatred for the elderly. In the midst of a room-temperature cultural revolution that's lost its momentum, the Party carefully plans its next move. As the brittle bones of fragile empires begin to crack beneath their own weight, history's symphony reaches crescendo pitch. The future is all but certain.

Oneliner homyposting is one thing, but there are also those RPer who veil their homyposts in admittedly good quality multiple paragraph long well-written RP posts...

I will clarify though that I have nothing against RPing romance and alluding to sex in posts to drive the plot forwards, but going into graphic detail... no

The thing with my nation, by virtue of being an absolute monarchy, is decision making at the top is very personalized in many cases. There are fierce internal factional struggles, but oftentimes these are silent struggles of sorts, who can gain the ear of the monarch the best and such
