They're alright. Nothing that special. Lonely Train is the only song I've heard by them anyways.

Desecrate Through Reverence by Avenged Sevenfold. Dude I've really been getting into A7X's metalcore stuff in the last month or so. Waking the Fallen is probably one of my favorite albums at the moment.

A7X was the best Metalcore band around. But I'm glad they moved on, 'cause now they're making badass Heavy Metal/Hard Rock, and All

That Remains stepped in to fill the void that was Metalcore without A7X. My favorite A7X Metalcore songs are Unholy Confessions, and Second Heartbeat, which just so happens to be what I'm listening to now.

My faves are Second Heartbeat, Remenissions, Unholy Confessions, Chapter 4, Desecration Through Reverence, Darkness Surrounding, The Art of Subconscious Illusion...I'll probably stop there. By far my favorite metalcore band. I hope they continue to incorporate it in future albums like they did with God Hates Us. It wasn't that good of a song but it's good to hear Shadows scream again. Anyways, yeah I'm glad they moved on because City of Evil and Self Titled were equally amazing. Nightmare was good, but I think it's not as good as the 3 before it. I bought all of Waking the Fallen, City of Evil, and self titled. But only 4 songs off of Nightmare

Have you heard anything from their 1999 Demo? It sounds sooooo different! As for ATR, I'm not a huge fan just because I haven't listened to them all that much but I like Chiron, Two Weeks, and a song off of the Fall Of Ideals that I can't remember the name of...

Two Weeks isn't really metalcore but it's still a great song. Catchy as a damn pop song! In fact, listening to it now ☐

It's still a Metalcore band. Two Weeks is more Alternative Metal, though it does have Metalcore in it, with the distorted guitars and fast double kicking drums.

Yeah haha I know it's still a metalcore band with metalcore elements in the song...but Two weeks was their attempt at getting a hit on rock radio. And I love it!

Bullet For My Valentine-Scream Aim Fire

Kreator was one of the first thrash metal bands, and have a lot of speed metal and death metal elements. Their album Pleasure To Kill (their only album I've heard from), at least, is way speedier and more brutal than anything the big four put out.

Oh, well then you can count me out. I strongly dislike most Death Metal, and I HATE Slayer. If they're anything like Slayer or Anthrax, with more brutality, I'll probably have none o' that.

I don't like Anthrax or Slayer either. I'm fond of two Kreator songs. shruggs Wikipedia labels them only as thrash metal, but goes on to say they influenced modern death metal and used a lot of speed metal elements in their early works (which is what I was listening to). I haven't listened to it, but their very first album is said to have been part of the first wave of black metal, combining black and thrash metal. But they never really went back to thrash metal after that. I don't like black metal, so I'm reluctant to listen to it

By the way, they were formed in 1982 and are still active. That's pretty impressive, almost 30 years.
