"Let's just say, that the choice to establish your clan in a group of islands surrounded by ice and snow wasn't the best food-wise, as even in greenleaf very little grows so far north. So, unless you are better fishers than RiverClan, and/or get food source from somewhere else, it is probably not going to end too well. Although, you seem to be the remnants of a larger clan which committed mass atrocities, and went to war with too much clans at the same time - perhaps those islands were a way better pick than I thought, because the larger clans will probably not want to bother much with a bunch of militaristic islands surrounded by ice, where basically everyone is a warrior. I am quite interested about her career - it seems that she was a pilot of a whole pack of those metal monsters in the skies (aircraft), and a good one at that. Although she got injured, her skill still resulted in her avoiding a death. But... the more I read about predecessors, the less I start to like both her, and the remnants as a whole - a lot of the leadership would make Brokenstar pale in comparison, and the Dark Forest would welcome them with open arms..."

"Funnily enough, there is no better description for the head of the 'Moderate Party of Deltia' than 'mediocre'. A tremendous liberal bore in office taints the Deltian reputation for flair and the dramatics. Can you believe this, 2031 acts passed and not one of them memorable. Thousands of accomplishments and the most noted was a minor banning of media censorship that clearly wasn't important enough to be described in anymore then a half a phrase. How can someone so influential influence so little? I'm sure a wise man once said to 'tread the path less followed' and I hope we see some more Statesmen from Deltia who follow such sentiment."

"President Smith reads less like a Statesmen and more like a personal account. Little in his biography leaves wake for greatness. On a much better note, German Intelligence by wake of the New Abwehr has a good read on the Nacradian Armed Forces. To be commended for 'proficient [...] muzzle discipline' is telling of the quality of soldiers they foster abroad."
