The Indian Armed Forces -the official military of an India defined roughly along the borders of the old Raj- is divided into the four branches of Army, Navy and Air Force. Also, Brazil is named Lusitania in their timeline. Not even "New" Lusitania like you'd expect the primary colony of a country originally named "Lusitania" to be, just flat-out Lusitania.

Apparently, the word "Nacrad" comes from Russian "na krai", or "on the borderlands", which I personally doubt given that their "geological"[sic] location is far from any Russian borderland, unless of course this can be explained in the future. The second etymology makes a bit more sense given it comes from a native language. Their President, oddly enough, sounds to be of British descent, given his name. A lot of their cities have English name instead of Chinese ones, which tells me they were colonised by the British Empire some time ago. Their population is also 30% Muslim; this extremely high concentration I find really odd, for the Muslim peoples of China are located far, far west of their location; this is not mentioning the high concentration of Jews, as well. Christians I can perhaps believe, if the British were so inclined in converting the populace.

The Brits were there actually before the Age of Discovery as we know it today, and the land was rather empty at that time, so that's why its converted so much. And they f--- ahem copulated with so many local girls that everyone is kinda a mixed race. Think Macau but times 1000. And then some choose to adopt an English name because of cultural integration /skip

The USSR let a lot of their republics go, as evident by the lack of a few states in the SSR list, they're also THE largest exporter of..oil and gas if I recall correctly? Not only that, but they also have a large number of untapped resources just ripe for the taking.

As part of Stalin's Fuck The World policy, nearly a third of the Soviet nuclear stockpile was launched at every "Allied Nations Member's capitals". This, in 1949, included pelting Africa with 1,100 nukes for some reason. Jesus wept

It's an itty bitty nation betwixt Poland and Germany proper, but it also has a remarkably outsized level of influence over the Baltic Sea, granting it a degree of economic growth that would not normally follow from an otherwise unremarkable realm.

Edited: Yes, I noticed I've been ninja'd, but I have to say that Tranzoria's post was rather lackluster. This thread is not asking for your impressions on the AN (that would be the "Your thoughts on AN" thread), but for some specific fact

The Entente's big brain genius plan was to make Danzig independent so as to appease both the Germans and Poles. But it changed little and they were invaded by one of the two anyway years later. Should have went to Poland though.

The only thing they could've done that'd be even more retarded would be letting Germany keep it lmao. The Free City was the perfect middle ground, the problem was not enforcing its neutrality on the both sides.

Anyway: After fighting a Lettow-Vorbeck-style campaign against the Allies in Africa, Rommel was found innocent in a tribunal. It was expected he'd go help the West's German state, but he refused to fight against fellow Germans in the so-called "Prussian Republic", and instead decided to escape to Libya, become Muslim and found his own Sultanate in a former Italian colony. Oh, and he went to a Hajj at some point in his life, but no mentions of that anywhere.

They are a city-state located between Germany and Poland. They have a lot of influence over the Baltic sea and this has allowed for the establishment of an extremely strong economy. The city-state is very well developed with very high standards of living.

A Sultanate located in Southern India ruled by Sultan Arslan Siddiqui Bahadur.

Surprisingly enough, despite the fact the primary diversion occurs before the coup that triggered the collapse of the Soviet Union, the modern USSR doesn't control the Baltic States, Georgia, Azerbaijan and Armenia.

A Lithuanian artillery expert Kasimir Simons is considered a founding father of rocketry after publishing Artis Magnae Artilleriae in 1650, an artillery textbook containing, among other knowledge, techniques of the construction of multistage rockets, batteries of rockets, and rockets with delta wing stabilizers.

Reading about the Advertisement Act factbook, which I hope you don't mind me borrowing for Valentine Z (credit will be given!), I learned that ads on screens and LCDs are banned as intrusive, along with audio ads.

Ohhh how I wish the real life will be like this, I thought to myself. It would be really, really amazing. And I love the timeslots that the ads get even on other forms of media.

Absolutely meta that the F7 universe even affects what goes on in your nation. Such as how Holly had a change in attitude and learned to become more open by talking with leaders from Sitka, Bloodshade, Zitragrad, and Stanier. If she met the Patron from Surrealist Patagonia first, I wonder what would happen tho.

They're technically a two-nation state, with one group in Brazil under a queen who was forced to kill her husband in order to save her family, and the other group in Libya under Erwin Rommel, who has apparently converted to Sunni Islam.

Certainly not lacking in the drama department...

They have a building in their capital city called 'The Magister's Lair' that has been turned into a museum dedicated to the era in which that building saw use.

In their timeline, Prussia -or North German Confederation, possibly- expanded much further into Poland than it did after the Congress of Vienna gave much of its Partition to Russia. To a certain degree it looks similar to the Frontier strip in wwI.
