(Kinda rude, dontcha think?)

No factbooks, so I guess /skip.

The Democratic Republic of Oskenia (shortened: Oskenia) is a sovereign island-nation off the coast of the European mainland, south of France and Italy, bordering the Mediterranean Sea. It occupies the islands of Corsica, Sardinia, Sicily, Malta, and the Balearic chain.

NT is a economic juggernaut with a GDP greater then our entire planet plus another half. It has a massive military that likely dwarfs the combined military of all other nations. It has truely earned the term "Hyperpower"

That once upon a time an unspecified alien race dared to challenge and attack An'Kaz. A mere week later the race was purged. Other races tried to form the coalition to gang up on An'Kaz, but two weeks later their homeworlds were destroyed and coalition members were subjugated in a Mongol fashion (just pay us tribute, we don't care about your culture or political system). Sorry for that obscure Terran reference. How species-centric I am!

Their vice president had four kids with his wife Aisha.

If my recognition of the picture of this guy is correct, the following joke applies:

He had one kid... then another one... and another one... and another one...

(Incidentally, I was debating whether to skip over the above post, but then I read the other guy's factbooks and realized Agwaiti pretty much nailed it... there wasn't much else to work with, so props, yo)

It's interesting that the military age is cited from 18 to 40 years old. The lower bound is fine and well for the legal age, so that is rather typical. For the 40 y/o, however, I wonder... does it just mean that in the event of an emergency, the older soldiers won't be called for arms anymore? It's like RL Singapore whereby after serving 10 cycles, or after a certain age, they stopped calling you back when you became an old fuck. 🤔 Or does the "Military Age" just means battlefield age, so those 40+ will still serve in another branch?

Pretty fascinating! ♥

Bonus: This sentence and statement: The term 'Payplinari' was either deprecated by most institutions or conserved as a slang meaning an homosexual female Inking.

So I learned that they are taking out the slangs and possibly derogatory terms, which I welcome, of course! ^^ It's like taking the f-word for homosexuals, and the n-word for African-Americans, if I draw a comparison with RL. At least, I think so?

AN: The existence of Dyson swarms, which is pretty neat on its own, of course. I wonder what they would cite as environmentally damaging, because as eco-friendly as I want to be, there are some planets that have precious materials but just won't harbour life. For instance.... I don't think I will see much of a purpose in damaging the ground of a planet that rains molten iron sideways!

(Bonus: I like how the motto specifically says that you don't use NS Stats. I can relate to those that solely uses NS Stats. Make no mistake, I don't mind NS Stats, of course! But... it will be helpful if people read my stuff more. ^^);

I might be fairly basic, but it seems that the territory of the modern-day US (sans Puerto Rico) is controlled by an autonomous subdivision dedicated to the military defense of the planet.

Intgaming, contrary to it's name, really has nothing to do with online gaming. Instead, it's a table-top brain-game sport that rivals chess. Maybe you could add a section more about the history and development of the sport because it looks really interesting. I could see there being scholarships and courses dedicated to 'intgaming'.

During the decade of the 1950s, Sharisfani declared war on the small arctic island of Haudugen, later on, Nacrad and the Levathian fleet joined the tide of the war, over a not-so fierce fighting for 3 days, Nacrad and it's allies lost the war with hundreds of casualties and international humiliation while the Haudgen Reich, surprisingly had zero casualties and only one injury at all for one small arctic island.

However, Nacrad probably had revenge on Haudugen by kicking off a second war, and that's all currently.

The empire of Majapahit is extremely diverse, more so than any other country. The many ethnic, linguistic, and religious groups are united by their shared lingua franca and ideology. Additionally, they all swear allegiance to the emperor, or Maharaja, a political and spiritual leader. This unity amongst diversity through ideology and emperor is known as Pan-Nusantaranism.
