I forget how far down on that map Belgium would normally span.

I've been to Flanders Field, tho... and the Ardennes... and the Keukenhof gardens. The Nederlanders reeeeeeeally love their tulips.

They are basically a Christian-Buddhist hybrid nation which spans across dimensions with an almost infinite population and although they have less territory as such, it doesn't really matter, they are INTERDIMENSIONAL for God's sake. Sacre Bleu ! That's both awesome and scary.

Their national anthem is "Hey Slavs!" and the lyrics in English are here:

*Hey, Slavs, in our heart
The grandfathers of our words,
While it is beating in the chest
For the people with love.*

*Long live, long live the Slavic spirit,
Long live the ages.
We are threatened in vain from hell
The devil is in chains.*

*Let the walls be broken down,
The sea will spill,
Let everything storm around,
Let the earth shake.*

*Our homeland is never us
We will not give up in trouble.
A traitor to his homeland
In hell let him perish.*

They seem to be in a different planet with a different land but they also call it "Earth", perhaps it's an alternate universe?

Doreania is pretty much a France equivalent set in the present day, with a constitutional monarchy still in place. The French Revolution never occurred. Instead, during the mid to late 1700s, Doreania experienced an economic boom brought on by the Industrial Revolution which kickstarted their rise to global power.

Please continue reading, it gets more ironic. Also Ravenians are ethnically German, so.

The Roman Kingdom has been reduced greatly. In its current form, it encompasses most of Italy south of the river Tiber, but also Sicily and Corsica. The rest of Italy is currently under owned by the continent's rightful owners the Lombards.

A Frisian republic in the Low Countries region, which once was a glorious trade union and part of the Holy Roman Empire. Now just a fraction of what it was, but still a regional power.

Man, didn't know Lombard stans existed :v

I like the history you have so far, I don't see a lot of mention of the Hanseatic League or general HRE politics mentioned a lot on NS.
