"Inogo, he is a fine lad, definitely one I consider a close friend. He's a rather adventurous one which is why our friendship resonates so well. It usually leads to some wacky antics but I feel like I haven't really spoken on a personal level. He cares for his people, and even the animals around him, his stead is rather unique as most riders ride horses it surprised me that he rode a ram, I thought he was goofy at first but eventually we started to vibe with one another quite well.

He is very spiritual as well, as I see the dead so does he, it's nice to know im not the only one out there talking to ghosts. But in all honesty while we do get into our antics I still hold a great respect for him"-Luden You're pretty weird but you're also pretty capable too- when you set your mind to something, you achieve it. Respectable. I don't know why you ousted the unnamed king but when you're immortal you gotta pass the time somehow, right? You're painfully edgy but you don't seem malicious, so I don't dislike you or your quaint tribe. Have fun doing creepy guy stuff bone-man."

"Well, whoever this 'General Onox' fellow seems to be, he is quite a character, isn't he? Let's see, so he is some leader of a warring robotic legion? Now, aside from that, while he does seem to be quite tall in comparison, he does also certainly look the part of a menacing and fearless general with those weapons and pointy ends on his armour, certainly one would not like to be forced to confront such a menace! Now, his backstory is certainly no different than your typical mad lad going crazy over time and eventually becoming some crackpot warlord later on, the way he likes to refer to himself does remind me of the Hulk in general, although to be frank, the movies were quite a letdown in general, as many people would agree.."

She is utterly mad and will risk millions at the slightest hint of perceived aggression, instead of resolving the alleged act of war through diplomacy and not by firing shots. Ortiz will be death of her nation, if she does not cool it with the fanatic jingoism. Militarism is an excellent tool to boast the people and politicians to advocate and push for strengthening their armed forces to defend against threats. But trying to justifying military spending by deliberately provoking foreign powers and claiming it was "self defense" is not the practical method, and as said before will severely cost millions. If this continues."

"...You know, I've had to deal with a fair few foreign leaders in my time as Director-General. They tend to corrupt and self-serving, utterly unfit for their supposed role even within the context of the dictatorship of the bourgeoisie, but Laura Ortiz is something different. Prone to rash, violent decisions and afflicted with numerous mental health issues, on top of her alcoholism, she makes the bloody capitalists look almost reasonable. Her deputy, Schloss, seems like a far more reasonable and indeed capable individual. It's a wonder he hasn't simply removed Ortiz and seized power for himself. It could hardly be much worse."

AN:

"I suppose the High Marshal has an impressive resume as a military leader. Indeed, I would go so far as to say that a commendation is in order for his work in overthrowing this Andrew Ryan character. Jumped-up parasite got what he deserved. Still, the regime he serves isn't all that much of an improvement. Ryan may have been a snake but was undone by his own foolishness fairly quickly, while Mercer is actually competent and no less poisonous. Also, the weird quasi-monarchy arrangement with Ariel as Mercer's adopted son and heir is hardly something I'd be willing to support. While a competent military commander, I see no reason why the High Marshal would make for an effective civilian leader. Actually, he'd still probably be better than the current Mercer."

San Hro: YOU ARE A SYMBOL OF WESTERN IMPERIA- OUCH!! I NEED THAT

After Inogo kicks San in the family jewels to get him to shut up, Inogo gives his opinion about Mark.

Inogo Estima: So Mark, I'm not a fan of foreign intervention because countries tend to be that way for a reason, but this does not mean we shouldn't intervene at all. So, let's see what kind of intervention you have done, annexing Portugal for it's safety? Well I don't think Portugal has much oil, cue in the stereotypes of America fighting for oil instead of democracy. But considering what you're fighting, the NOD which is this global terrorist group... I think it's mostly justified. So I won't hate you for that.

So Mark, you don't seem to be an evil man, not even close. You are a man who had to take drastic actions, because you had to take drastic actions and holy shit your dedication to just learning, wow. No seriously I would just give up having to learn all that theory, its not worth it.

So you support democracy huh? Well, in my experience democracy tends to get strangled by excessive capitalism however you didn't talk about economics at all, oh well keep your secrets.

So I did some reading about the NOD and I don't like them. Thier first statement about resisting imperialism is nice, after all Sherechia was wrecked by 6 decades of imperialism done by a country similar to that of the US, but then about them being enlightened. Fuck off, you're not enlightened until you spend 12 hours a day meditating in a Tsaotak or Buddhist temple and having your fat arse carried by cherry blossoms into the heavens. If you are an organization, at war, you are not enlightened.

And the nation to the south of Portugal doesn't sound so friendly, eliminating heretics. We're all heretics really, just that everyone has different interpretations on what heretic means.

So in conclusion, I like you, but I need to know more about you, especially about economics.

"Well, comrade Estima, I will begin by commending you for your efforts in overthrowing the previous bourgeois government. From what I hear they were a particularly nasty infestation of parasites, and it seems they got what they deserved. Your own government is in many ways an improvement, and has been greatly beneficial for Sherechian development, which is admirable and should be rightly praised.

However, I am afraid that my praise must end here. The fact is that I can't consider your regime to be socialist. Market 'Socialism' is just another form of capitalist economic organisation, retaining exchange, competition, capital, money, and many other features of the bourgeois economic structure. Sherechian enterprises may be worker-owned and democratic, but that doesn't prevent them from being subject to capitalist economic forces which will necessarily hold sway within a competitive market system. Essentially, it forces the workers to exploit themselves, even if such exploitation is in some sense lessened by this system. To put it plainly, the hell of capitalism is the firm, not the fact that firm has a boss.

Secondly, I find your attachment to Sherechian spiritualism to be concerningly idealist and unscientific. I understand that you say you've met with some historical figures within the 'afterlife', and will give you the benefit of the doubt in assuming that this story isn't made up. However, the only real alternative I can see is that you were hallucinating in some way, possibly brought on by your circumstances at the time. Now, I'm not a psychologist, so I can't say whether this is a liability with regards to your ability to govern, but it's still a bit concerning. Still, you seem reasonably confident so I might be worrying over nothing. Stress gets to us all sometimes.

To conclude, while I respect you for overthrowing the old regime and enacting changes that are certainly progressive given Sherecia's material conditions, I cannot consider you to be a socialist comrade. The fact that you adhere to what is ultimately a capitalist economic system, despite its egalitarian ambitions, and promote unscientific idealist beliefs, holds you and Sherechia back from achieving true socialism. Still, there doesn't seem to be anyone in a good position to drive this transition right now, so you have my critical support for the moment."

"No, we will not be her socialist comrades! I mean, all four major factions won't satisfy her tastes. Cowboy Republic is too capitalist for her, Chillax Dudes are too spiritualistic, although, this could be somewhat said about all factions since they are all secular, not atheist. Still, Chillax Dudes are most spiritualistic folks with all their new age thoughts. So these two are no-no for her. Neoners and CRT/FAE... Neoners are pro-market economical centrist techies, so despite being scientific, they won't be her comrades, although might be able to take a peek at some tech data if they get lucky. CRT/FAE are syndicalist, but they will be too decentralized.

Lesser factions? Free City of New Sodom would be too tacky for her, she ain't interested in carnal sins at all. And Kompeki no Bakufu faction, in Azure Beaches Five Stars Resort won't interest her at all. New Providence privateers? She could hire them, but probably wouldn't.

Besides, all our factions are interweaved, so their sum, which is semi-anarchist social democracy will not go well with her. We are too "unsocialist" and "unscientific" for her. Cause while we respect scientists and provide them with lavish budget, so they keep makin' awesome thingies for us, and we also care for workin' folks and have shorter work hours and extensive rights and equal rights for all, we still operate on market economy and believe, that there are more things in this world than just science.

The King wouldn't have orchestrated a genocide of your murderous kind without a good reason. Your expansionist policies and rampant militarism allude to your innermost imperialist desires, which would be to propagate more of your kind at the direct expense of those beneath you. I get it, your mother was imprisoned for being different, and your father was helpless to prevent her transformation. Some people are cursed by circumstance, but I can't bring myself to sympathize with a monster liege. You could have used your immortality for the greater good, nothing in the Low Bloods can really keep you down forever, and that wasted potential is what I consider to be your greatest tragedy."

"This Luden fella sounds like something pulled straight out of a fantasy novel. I've done my fair bit of reading, the general eeriness that resonate with me are that of Western authors like H.P Lovecraft. He's a King, I don't like what feudalism entails, and I certainly wouldn't approve of being ruled over by an immortal monster. The authorities were right to fear the beasts like you, Luden. Luden face palms rather hard.

"This happens more than I can count, perhaps I should clear some misunderstandings as it happens often, no matter how many times I specify both in and out of text. * he slams his hand on the desk.

I did not initiate that war, just because I was on the side of the beasts did not mean I was a beast back then.

I was a normal kid, I was literally in my teenage years.

And the man who was on the side of beast wasn't fighting just for the sake of some bloodthirsty creatures, they killed anything that they thought was relatively close to beasthood, you had traits of an animal because of your species, killed. You even got a little beastblood in your system, killed. It wasn't a surprise I helped overthrow that king he killed the beast that was once my mother just because of his fear. Im not asking for your sympathy, but I'd like you to know both sides of the coin.

I haven't even done much militaristic things, haven't waged a war on anything since I took the crown... Even the expansion, the lands I have taken for our own are not occupied by nations, they were considered too dangerous when our nation was smaller. All I've done is researched planes and helicopters, Low blood is lacking in both air and sea, both in defense and basic travel.

As for my immortality, I didn't look like this beast you see yo this day. I find it ironic, when I was defending the beast, I was shot down and captured once I was found to be immortal.

You see the immortal trait I have isn't a common occurrence it's the rarest trait you can have here in lowblood.

So what do you do when you don't understand something? You explore it you learn as much as you can. The king decided as a traitor to the state I will be donated to a shady company dedicated to "cracking" the secrets of immortality.

My tests were brutal and I was constantly wearing a blindfold. Due to various reasons my body regenerates to this form. I seem to have lost my human form. But allow me to say"-Luden walks off, seeming to be vary out of breath.
