What comes after however is what makes or breaks your legacy, leveraging your position as it is now to centralize more power around yourself is a good start, but I'm guessing ya should already be building for the next raid eh?

the limitations of communication between powers, and the need to marshal forces fast enough to respond thanks to the time period means that your in prime position to perform even more operations. I look forward to seeing what you can do in the future."

"Is it so surprising that the war profiteer doubts that negotiations will succeed? Demand for the Chief Enforcer's services relies on peace talks failing, so Sera Marut has no incentive to refrain from ordering takeout in the middle of negotiations, because she has no investment in the peace talks succeeding. From what I can see of her file, I do not suspect she did it on purpose, but even subconsciously such temptations might drive someone to doubt the forces that would put them out of business. It goes to show the grave danger of commercializing violence. As soon as you start to pay for a problem, people develop a knack for creating that problem. Under capitalism and corporatism, where accountability is to profit margins instead of people, it's inevitable."

Official Judgement of The Overseers:

Judgement: Engelford is an anarchic dissenter
Punishment: Hanging, drawing and quartering

"We have not encountered anything as degenerate as this in a long time. A self proclaimed 'Anarcho-Marxist'? Thou may as well scream 'execute me', but we digress. Frederick Engelford is a mentally and spiritually impure and misguided juvenile, corrupted by the degenerate works of the communist menace. He does not realize that both communism and capitalism are one and the same, being mere faces of the degenerate enlightenment era. His opposition to the idea of the state is baffling to us, for we know what he does not in that the state must permeate every facet of life in order for society to remain stable. Engelford and his anarchist and communist contemporaries fail to realize that only through rigorous slave labor in a glorious feudal serfdom can man truly be pure both physically and spiritually. His involvement in an uprising against his elders is a thing on its own, as it goes against the very hierarchy that keeps society from crumbling. And don't get us started with the decadence he and all other youth in those days were spoiled with. 'Video games' are a demonic curse to distract man from his intended work. In the end, this dissident fool will come to his senses and realize how much the world has degenerated, but we can enthusiastically accelerate that realization with a simple execution."

The Tilminese Federation is a totalitarian fascist theocracy ruled with an iron fist by The Overseers, a fanatical organization of theocratic fundamentalists seeking to eradicate 'modern degeneracy'. Has scenic architecture, no light pollution, quiet streets and public executions for the smallest crimes. Oh and one in every four Timinese has died from starvation, disease, execution, forced labor, and genocide ever since the Overseers have taken power but that's not too important.

Doing Classroom 3-B as well, since I started writing a response but someone else posted.

"I would like to start by saying that I cannot support schoolchildren unilaterally taking over their school, as much as we may fantasize about such things as kids. Putting that aside, though, we have here a very intriguing microcosm of society, where three surprisingly mature (for some value of mature, anyway) children are attempting to give their political ideals a trial run. Focusing on Freddy Engelford for now, his pathway to gaining his position as President of the Student Council and ultimately achieving his classroom's current autonomy shows a strategic mind. He is well read for his age - I cannot remember the last time I touched Bakunin, and I admittedly have not gotten around to reading Chomsky - and like his two fellow figures he has an unusual drive to put what he has read into practice. I am of course under no illusions that his experiment will end well, or at least result in an independent state, but young Mr. Engelford seems as though he has a promising life ahead of him."

- High Priestess Mai Chie of Ketorushima

"I have in my years seen many nations and rulers whose policies blatantly lead to ruin and suffering for their citizens, but even the worst of the worst generally at least believe themselves to have their people's best interests in mind. In short, I cannot recall seeing such an anti-human group of leaders as these Overseers. It is one thing to be skeptical or even antagonistic toward modernity - I myself have been guilty of such in the past - but the Overseers actions and proclamations go far beyond any pretensions of traditionalism. Their virtues seem to be the promotion of human suffering and the elimination of any joy or fulfillment in life, something even the most abominable tyrant would not admit to believing. With an attributable death toll of twenty five million and a history of ethnic destruction to rival the Holocaust, it is clear that these Overseers have no place in any world, modern or otherwise. If any illusions of civility from them remained they would be dashed by the fact that they have publicly called for a high schooler's execution on this public platform."

"The 'Overseers', you say? I frankly don't think that you lot are fit to be in any sort of leadership position, let alone leading a country. You try to make your country, frankly, a hellhole to live in, where people barely survive and fear to speak out, but what for? Just some inferiority complex? Just to powertrip? A good leader, in my opinion, is precisely the opposite of you. Your subjects ought to - and I believe that they wish to - revolt against your rule. My hopes that you will learn of your mistakes, and steer away from this misguided form of governance."

AN: "Compared to the Overseers, the High Priestess is someone I find much more likable. Her devotion to modernisation, in my eyes, symbolises that she wishes not to consolidate power with disregard to human life, but to improve her country. However, I find myself in disagreement to her friendly solitude. While I do understand that humans have been hostile to the Yokai, I don't think that the best course of action is to simply isolate oneself from them. Certainly, with clever diplomatic games, you can sway the human opinion. Simply isolating yourself, on the contrary, cannot."

"I... I'm not completely certain how I should feel about her. Certainly, she is as abrasive as I would expect from a godless barbarian such as herself, but... Other than the cruel remarks she can sometimes seem to offer those who hide things about themselves... I don't think she is a bad person- certainly not as predestined for evil as I am. And, in this way, I think she is amazing, as well as admirable- it is no surprise, then, that she would raise one so widely admired as her daughter... Indeed, in a certain way, I feel as if she almost reminds me of Father, though perhaps Bassaine would be a better fit. Oh, but I shouldn't make this about my relationships- I was asked my opinion of you, and I wouldn't want to waste your time... I admire you as, despite your heathen tendencies, you are a... a better... uhm, that is... I think you are I think you are good enough to be worthy of happiness and grace."

-Princess Euphrosyne, I'm not really sure why, but I do think they wouldn't actually get along, despite what Euphrosyne might think.

Take 2 on being active, let's see how it goes!
