Wakabayashi-kun's mood: Very Critical

"God of magical combat? What is with leaders nowadays, do they hate it when other people see them as weak and entirely mortal? Tch, I refuse to accept that his 'godhood' is factual, in other words, a reality. If not then Draksesa-kun to me is a loner for a god of magical combat. If he's a Vanir, a tribe I absolutely abhor, that would make perfect sense, and since he appears not to be one, I don't believe in his personal abilities to do his magical combat shtick."

The Prime Minister of Okamijima, Yasuo Wakabayashi, is a very trustworthy and honest man, capable of doing anything he puts his mind to with the help of his fellow Government Members. How will the Spellcard Rules and the relationship between the youkais and the humans change under a Marxist paradigm? How will the need to gather faith be reconciled with Marxist dialectical materialism? And will Marisa and Reimu again come and rescue the day? Will this simply be hushed up as another "Incident", or a permanent change for Gensokyo?

Her isolated and, it must be said, tragic background according to my sources does not suggest she would have the expertise required to lead a centralized state. Then again, good leaders have come from unlikely places. Moving on to matters of policy and politics, the Marxist-Leninist path she has chosen reminds me of the former Soviet Union to our south, which did not, to put it mildly, bring prosperity. That said, it was certainly better than the Tsar that preceded it, and it would appear that Gensokyo's de facto former leader was mostly inactive. The word 'gulag' in the list of councils provided is a major cause for alarm, and while there do seem to be councils representing the local religions of Gensokyo, including one connected to my own faith, I have also seen statements that suggest religion is now discouraged there. Le Patron is having dinner with an associate of his in his own occultist compound. Literally "eating the rich". The two get together in a ritual intended to increase the bond between two fraternal manly comrades when consuming the flesh of the bourgeoisie. Le Patron wrestles against his colleague, biting and scratching him, before settling down and dine on the carcass of dead rich men and women like vultures laid neatly on a table in this cannibalistic ritual. "Raw and exquisite" Le Patron remarked as he takes a bit on human flesh.

"Who are you as a warrior to feel pity and having the need to recite the name of dead enemies. They only exists for you to overcome not to sulk over their dead corpses.
