Okay, maybe just the handshake, don't want to be weird, eh? I love your appearance in Buon Dia Stanier!, that was super amazing on the things you have said and talked about on the show! Cosa Bellissima is good too, but I have to keep asking Admiral Augustine because I kept missing the Italian references! Very happy to see you, and I hope you have been well with managing your nation because Stanier is a pretty awesome place that I would love to visit one day. See you around, and please take care of yourself as well! I am Adriana, and see you later! ♥

We all love them, because they just emit positivity and happiness. Relations are highly positive. Do I need to say more?

I guess, I should, for she is not only wholesome, but also tough as hell, due to being well made machine of such sizes. "Aww, he's so cute! And he's working really hard on all the really complicated economy stuff! I love him so much! Except for the part where he ruins everything on purpose! I don't like that part! People should be happy! They should have all the joy they could ever want! But that's not what you want, is it? That's not what anyone wants anymore. Sometimes, you give people happiness however you can! But you just want them to be dumb, don't you? Maybe they can be dumb and happy, but you only care about the dumb part! And the happy part, but not in a good way! Maybe! I don't know much about businesses and things! All that control is so you can do what's best, you know! Maybe you are doing that in your own way, and I just don't like it. People fight a lot over things like that, and that makes me sad! So I won't fight you! I love you, but I don't think we'd be very good friends though!"

"I recently read in detail the circumstances leading up to and following the collapse of Kyoki Chudoku, and while Gikochinai's state is certainly preferable to, say, Hanabi's domain, I would not call it pleasant. Regardless of how one may evaluate Gikochinai's mental state, she truly does appear to want happiness and prosperity for the people in her territory, but as difficult as those things may be to achieve given the shattered nation's state, warping people's minds through drugs and tainted food is never justifiable. Being blind to any sources of distress due to an addled mind is not true happiness, and is definitely not prosperity. Perhaps one day the situation in the Chodukuran isles will stabilize, and Gikochinai will have an opportunity to bring about real prosperity and happiness, but if she continues on this path of manipulating her citizens' minds the damage may already be done. In the end, while Gikochinai does seem to be the most genuinely caring of Kyoki Chudoku's remnant leaders, her methods in attempting to move her lands forward are harmful, and her mental state is... concerning, to say the very least."

"Luden seems like a decent guy, all things considered. I feel pretty sorry for him though. His past doesn't sound like a kind one. Depression, being experimented on. Not good stuff. As for his goals, I can get behind most if not all of those too. National expansion sounds a little aggressive at first glance, but realising that he simply wants to occupy some of the unused land on his continent makes it seem a lot more understandable as an aim. It sounds like he just wants to help his nation and his people grow really. I think it's a bonus too that he's actively been enjoying his job, it means he genuinely cares about it and is trying to do the best he can."

"There is something beautiful about the world the Patron has built; nay, beyond beauty, and in fact exceeding human understanding entirely. What an enigma of a man! Crawling from the sewers of tragedy, he summoned within himself the courage and furthermore the spiritual quality to express, beyond the petty thievery of his youth, a beautiful understanding of our world. To then grasp power in one fluid motion makes ostensible his valour and bravery. But these virtues are thorned, like roses. This idealistic swan on the lake of consciousness immediately finds itself dragged down by its own weight, crushed in a maelstrom arising from its faculties but ultimately abstract from its control. He has created a land, a la the high-Shakespearean tragedy of visionaries such as he, which has only served to degenerate, to atomise, to crush. Its depravities know no bounds, and it is for this reason that I must sadly consider Svoboda to be dangerous."
