They have built entire ringworlds capable of housing billions of inhabitants in space. Also, space elevators, somehow.

Imperial Majapahit, because they deserve a real response:
Despite accusations of media censorship, political suppression, and human rights abuses, Maharaja Jayanagara VII is quite popular among the people of Majapahit. He maintains a rather down-to-earth image, spontaneously visiting rural communities from time to time and regularly posting on social media.

Hatsunia:

Due to a housing crisis in the capital of Miraito, an urban development project called "Neo Miraito" was initiated, resulting in the construction of three very tall skyscrapers, intended to minimise land usage while housing as many people as possible - Millennium Tower, Sky City, and Sky Mile Tower. Tens of thousands have taken up residence in these buildings, and a further million people are expected to find housing in a future arcology known as the Mega-City Pyramid.

Khoronzonite society harbors surprisingly egalitarian attitudes towards AI-based beings, considering them a class of citizens mostly equal to humans, at least among Type II and above. This may be due to the fact that humans in Khoronzon, much like their robot counterparts, are largely expected to fulfill their designated roles and obey orders without dissent.

Their nation formed due to vast industrialization and extreme use of fossil fuels that lead to many parts of the world becoming uninhabitable. They saw major waves of climate refugees entering Antarctica as the land became more habitable. After some rough beginning with people struggling to live with one another, they now embrace their new identity and live in harmony.

The country has a compulsory military service policy in place, in which recruits can only leave after a full completion of the 4-year training, & are mandated to submit oaths proclaiming that they wick engage themselves in any war that the country happens to be fighting in - pretty much a catch-22 situation.

There is much speculation about the nation's name etymology - some have said that it came from the roots of an Indo-European language, whereas some assume it to be named after an eastern European tribe: however, there has not yet been any official position on the matter.

Ahh, okay so I pick one of the dumber and more trivial things about the populations. Learning about the fact that Hristhau has a Population of 4,192,937, which is a little more than 4,194,304 (2²²). The difference being 1367 people, which is a prime number.

Now, neither of them might be too interesting on their own, but it's interesting that the difference of 1367 is 0000 0101 0101 0111 in Binary, and the population is 0011 1111 1111 1010 1010 1001. I love how the numbers are flipped for those two groups of binary digits!

Oh right, where was I? Oh yeah, back to the topic. Also of interest is how in the most popular name list, there are only 1 G's and 1 X's. The latter was expected, but I thought I would have see more of names starting with G, since there are a lot more names with G. Hmm... maybe Gwen, Geraldine, Gerald, etc etc aren't just too popular!

Well, IC-wise the names were picked out of random birth certificates for last year - maybe we'll see more G names at the end of the year.

Their Sultan and founding monarch is a descendent of a Mughal noble family from the 18th century that lasted until 1948. This Sultan led a war of independence against India and won, and his nation was recognized as a legitimate nation. The Deccan Sultanate is considered a model for peaceful relations between Muslim sects and conducts anti-terror operations around the world.
