Cliche: font sizes exploding because of reasons, and you ended up having to put [size=] on literally everything and everywhere.

Tbf I've found a trick on how to tacke that, but it necessitates me to use the exact same size in all of the page.

About: A cyberpunk, post-apocalyptic, biblical Jewish state that spans the Nile to the Euphrates, acquired through 20 years of cataclysmic bloodshed. A shockingly racist system has evolved among its 429 million Jews and Gentiles and all of Mecca and Medina has been demolished, replaced by suburban housing and speculative real estate developments.

I don't think that's a cliché, more of a massive pain in the buttocks.
But what do I know?

There's actually a way you can jerry rig it so that you don't need to use [font] every time.

Using a braille space like the one between the two brackets (□) between every line break should do the trick. It's disgusting, but it saves a bit of time.

Properly Machiavellian characters on here I haven't seen at all. I'm assuming it's something difficult to knot down, hence the sheer lack of 'em. Or, most likely, I'm not looking hard enough at all. Or my standards are way too high.

Look, I know I'm shooting too far, I am aware that I'm just being a mumbling, sleep-deprived baboon at this moment, yet what I want, what I need a fix of is most definitely truly psychopathic character(s) on here. Why? I need a precedent to follow through with. It would be a nice touch, yes, but currently right now I'm clueless as to what to do on that area. I'll still soldier on, yes, but I'm lost as to what to do.

Coming up with another paragraph is harder and harder every passing second. I need sleep. I can't be bemoaning about this when the responses will always be the same. "It's almost like nothing has to conform to your unrealistic standards huh" I am aware, read the first goddamn paragraph. Nothing has to be about you trying to "demolish" the guy who is only a couple of pixels on a screen on some archaic website made 20 years ago by some Australian author/kids soccer coach that is only used by a fraction of the nations on here daily just because you want to seek some sense of superiority when you lack any. Criticize my actual points and rip them apart constructively (many thanks to FPR for actually giving great points against my argument in a separate thread, seriously, I actually wanted that to happen, thank you man) instead of trying to look cool for punching down, I guess. If you actually depend on that for an ego boost or to look better in front of your peers going after one of your own when your self-esteem is in the 8th circle of Hell, I would implore you to seek help. Or more if you already are. I understand it's hard to talk about all of what you're dealing with, yet it will bear fruit at some point.

Point is, actually critique shit. All that aside, I'm gonna go hit the hay now.

Battleships are the most visible and famous parts of the navy even though submarines are more effective (or not, in your case). It's like when people praise astronauts when it is actually mission control that does everything.

wym my PMT bootleg Yamato would require so much fuel it would cost several million dollars just to get it from one of my ports to another? (For context, it took about 70 tons of oil per hour to run the WW2 Yamato's propulsion system at max speed. Which, in this modern economy, would be about 42,070 per hour.) Wym that's unfeasibly expensive for a craft that would get annihilated in a modern war?

One thing that happens very often is the inability of many users not to externalize their OOC hatred towards a certain ideology to which your country unfortunately belongs. They often take advantage of the games in F7 to do so by hiding it behind an IC facade. And by doing this, completely ignoring the rules in the OP.

Late 19th century to early 20th century power projection doctrine was certainly a project of its time, and I can certainly understand why someone of that time period would think battleship > everything else given the sheer intimidation power; but it still somehow has this effect on people today despite the fact that modern carrier groups have far more firepower than any battleship fleet ever could. I suppose people just really like their giant short range guns while completely ignoring the fact that guided missiles could do far more damage to a warship than any 460mm gun battery could hope to achieve.

The modern equivalent of a battleship is an arsenal ship.

I've got a design of one somewhere but CBA'd to find it while I'm on my phone. Arsenal ships aren't actually a bad idea though, the only reason why the US didn't get them is that the Admiral in charge of the program killed himself and then the Cold War ended, eliminating the need. The concept was based on a study by RAND that determined that if 20% of an invasion force's vehicles were destroyed, the invasion would be unable to continue. To accomplish this, the Navy considered making what was essentially a flat-top VLS farm that could launch hundreds or possibly over a thousand cruise missiles without reloading.

That's not even close to a solution that you think it is. Why else would submariners call surface vessels targets?

Because anything to be engaged is called a target?

And I suppose by your logic we should just dump having any surface vessels cause submarines are invisible or something. Aircraft carriers? Absolutely ridiculous, the enemy has submarines.

Here's another NS cliché that's survived from Jolt though: smug 4chan-aping NS military designers who think hot takes make them authorities, I miss when they stayed on Statesmanship

No, because with current methods one cannot detect, let alone engage a submarine before it shoots and sinks you. Like, the playing field is in complete advantage to the submarine.

Also a complete submarine-based fleet for a minor country would be incredibly based... unlike the one where it tries to buy a tanker and fit three thousand Mk 41's to in order to invade somebody 6000 miles away with its nonexistent army.
