That I really should have paid attention to the warning at the top of the 'Citizens of the Federation' factbook (RIP my eyes), and that their military uniforms include a helmet which appears to be almost identical to the German Stahlhelm, despite them currently being in the 29th century.

A galactic level cloud computing project that use organisms for computing power. What happened to servers? Aren't they enough? They dispose of inefficient organisms like throwing servers in the trash bin (what a waste. With the right components they could be used for budget gaming.).

That this nation is a really far successor of the Humans. Humans had created an oppressive Empire akin to the Imperium of WH40k, but parasites struck and some of the survivors landed on Titanuma to start anew. They had reached the Atomic Age once again, but incinerated themselves in the Resource Wars. After lingering in the underground vaults (Fallout anyone?) they have decided to start anew once again and they seem to be the most successful this time.

AN: though this nation may seem authoritarian, they cap military spending at 5% GDP (not the 5% of the annual budget!) and have free trade agreements with the US, the EU, Australia, New Zealand, ASEAN and MERCOSUR.

that they have two national anthems...i think..let's look at the national stuff:
national anthem 1 do you here the people sing
national anthem 2 Weaponry Flower black rose fossil deinonychus

hmm...i think that means that they have two NA.

Several takes:

- The fact that women are physically stronger than men for the most parts, and on how they play a bigger role in this seemingly gender-reversed world. Not that I have issues with that, but this was something that I didn't know until now, of course. So it's unusual but a fresh breath of air to see women playing a role in music industry and the sports industry, not just the typical "Women rule the world!" It's interesting to see the society in detail, an anthropological study, shall I say!

- Which brings me to this, copying and pasting from your factbook: The music industry is notably dominated by women, with prominent heads including Rosalie Ray (Stylized as ROSA113), Alexa Douglas (Known professionally as Nerv-3), and Abbie Cole (Abb1). Prominent bands tend to be more focused on rock. However, notably, there are still prominent aspects of other genres (Such as synth or dubstep, among others) giving rise to an entirely new genre of music: Spiedskan. Notable contenders in this genre include the Chord Fighters, Queens Blonde, and Beyond the Beach. I wonder if Rosalie is a take on Nintendo's Rosaline, given the inspirations involved and all that. Queens Blonde seems to be a mix between Queen and Blondie... I believe.

- The fact that handball and baseball are the most popular sports, which is pretty unique on its own. Normally, I would just see football or something a bit... typical. While there is nothing with football being a national sports, it's interesting that this is probably the first time I see handball as a popular/national sports. I wonder if I will find dodgeball in their country.

The several languages that made up their demographics. I would have think that an Empire, even with a good sense of unity, would have a slightly higher degree of unification after all the civil war and all that.
